U. S. COURT IS RECOMMENDED BY AMERICAN BAR

Administrative Court To Absorb Judicial Functions of 75 Government Agencies Is Urged After Years' Consideration.

CENTRALIZATION OF HEARINGS HIT 'Bewildering Multiplicity' and Overlapping of Juris- dictions of Agencies Are Attacked by Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—The establishment of a federal administrative court, which ultimately might absorb the judicial functions of 75 government agencies, was recommended today by a special committee of the American Bar Association.

In a report based on three years' research, the committee said that the present administrative agencies—such as the federal alcohol administration, the customs court, and the patent office—have the power to make regulations and decisions having the force of law.

"Evils" have resulted from the bewildering multiplicity of the overlapping jurisdictions of these agencies, the committee said, adding that the agencies combine judicial with legislative or executive functions, and in some cases there is provision for independent review of decisions.

The proposed court gradually would take over the judicial work of these administrative tribunals and, when feasible, its judges would be recruited from among the administrative officers who it supercedes.

Subject to Review.

The committee suggested that its proposals should be subject to review, specified cases, by the circuit courts of appeals divisions, and each division would be broken up into units specializing in particular classes of cases. Hearings would be held throughout the country to avoid excessive centralization in Washington.

In discussing the need for an independent administrative court, the committee declared that the division of non-judicial powers has taken place in the administration of George Washington but that the process did not assume substantial proportions until almost a century later.

At present, the committee said, there are about 1,300 separate independent agencies.

Former Atlantan Is Rescued From Wrecked Plane At Sea

One in Party of Ten Killed as Big Ship, Out to Welcome Queen Mary, Inexplicably Plunges; Frances Carpenter Writes Own Account.

Editor's Note: Francis Carpenter, one of the survivors of the plane crash recounted in the following article, which he wrote, is a former member of the Associated Press staff in Atlanta and a Georgian. His parents reside at Flower Branch, near Buford. He graduated from Emory University in 1929 and after several years on the Associated Press staff here, was transferred to the Boston office in June of 1935.

ABOARD S. S. EXERMONT.

EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—A 10-passenger seaplane, roaring a welcome to the British liner Queen Mary, crashed into the Atlantic ocean, five miles off Nantucket lightship early tonight, fatally injuring one man. Eight others, including myself, were rescued.

The liner anchored off Ambrose Light at 12:15 a. m. (Atlanta time) Monday, presumably setting a new record.

Edwin T. Ramsdell, 40, a Boston Post photographer, died several hours after the crash aboard the American Export liner Exermont, from which a boat's crew was dispatched to the rescue.

Ramsdell was knocked unconscious when the big plane, suddenly losing altitude, dropped into the rough sea.

The other eight suffered bruises and a severe shaking up.

The plane splintered to bits. For 20 minutes we clung to the wave-washed pontoons until the rescue boat from the Exermont reached us.

Captain William W. Wincapaw, who piloted the big seaplane, said the accident was unavoidable. He did not, at the moment, say what had happened.

Wincapaw suffered numerous bruises when he struck the water. Likewise the rest of us were cut and battered as the plane hit the choppy waves.

(First news of the crash came from the Queen Mary which relayed a radio message from the Exermont. The latter said a boat had been put over to go to the rescue.)

We had gone down from Boston to meet the Queen Mary. Ramsdell was taking a picture as we sailed slightly in the rear of the Queen Mary's stern.

Then our plane started downward. Others in the party were George Mason, vice president of the National Aeronautical Association; Herbert Stier, Boston Herald photographer; Leslie Cain, a mechanic; Walter Jordan, Christian Science Monitor photographer; Ezra Eaton, owner of Thompson's Spa, Boston, and William Reiter, vice president of La Touraine Coffee Company, owner of the plane. (Captain Wincapaw is known as "The Santa Clause of the Lighthouse Service," because of his annual flights along the barren New England coast.)

UNCLE'S LOCATION IS NEW MYSTERY ELEANOR TO STAY FOR BERLIN GAMES

Sheriff Says Clevenger Is in Jail, but Lawyer Insist Client Has Left.

By KENNETH GREGORY.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 26.—(AP)—The status or whereabouts of Professor W. L. Clevenger, detained Friday for questioning, became as deep a mystery tonight as the baffling murder of his 18-year-old niece, Helen Clevenger, in her hotel room 11 days ago.

The poorly, 54-year-old professor's lawyer said he left the county's skyscraper jail this afternoon, and is somewhere in Asheville. Sheriff Lawrence E. Brown and his deputies insisted he was in his cell.

Sheriff Brown forestalled a habeas corpus hearing for the prisoner by sending by airmail a letter to the judge, word that he had already released him.

Then, an hour later, the sheriff, chief investigator of the murder mystery, told newspapermen that Clevenger was voluntarily remaining in jail "to aid with the investigation."

"I Won't Say."

The sheriff would not explain Clevenger's status, however, as a voluntary prisoner.

"If Professor Clevenger walked out of the jail, would you stop him?" the sheriff was asked.

"I won't say," he replied.

Guy Weaver, Clevenger's lawyer, yesterday, announced to newspapermen shortly after 8 o'clock tonight: "Professor Clevenger left the jail this afternoon."

He refused, however, to say where the slain girl's bachelor uncle went, but said that he was still in the city.

"He will confer with Sheriff Brown at 11 o'clock before he leaves," Weaver said.

"I left the jail of his own accord, as he has been staying of his own accord."

He added the professor was not released.

Berlin, July 26.—(AP)—Cablegrams and a box of handkerchiefs showered in on Eleanor Holm Jarrett, ousted Olympian, today—as the pretty backstroke champion grinned and said she would stay in Berlin awhile.

With echoes of her banishment on charges of shipboard training infractions and her counter-charges of "misconduct" on the part of Olympic officials still bouncing around Berlin, Mrs. Jarrett decided to remain for the games, pending definite acceptance of a writing offering from an American source.

Visiting the Olympic pool for the first time—as sightseer, not swimmer—she debated her future course.

Among the offers she received was one from an American vaudeville tour.

Brundage Is Silent.

Smilingly, Mrs. Jarrett disclosed her former teammates among the American swimmers had sent her a box of handkerchiefs, with the note: "Keep your chin up."

She also received a cablegram from Samuel MacCabe, chairman of the "Move the Olympic" committee in New York, saying "America's self-respect demands the athletes' return home to participate in the labor games in August."

Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, revisited the Olympic village and received numerous assurances the American committee stood in holding fast to Mrs. Jarrett's disbandment had a strong majority backing.

He declined, however, to comment for publication.

Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, vice president of the committee, was delegated to tell Mrs. Jarrett that official responsibility for her maintenance ended at noon today.

Can't Return With Team.

He assured her also that her passage to the United States would be provided by the committee at any time she chooses to go home, before, during or after the games. She cannot, however, return with the main body of athletes which is scheduled to embark August 19, on the President Roosevelt.

However, it was disclosed, also received a number of cablegrams which approved the committee's action.

One of these, from Gregory Vignat Jr., of Kansas City, said Mrs. Jarrett's example to young Americans is deplorable.

As for Mrs. Jarrett's statement that she would stay in Berlin, it was not taken into consideration.

Cobb Says: 'Red' Came From Paint

By IRVIN S. COBB.

BOHEMIAN GROVE, Cal., July 26.—Yes, in my early days, we also had the little red schoolhouse. Maybe the reason we liked it then was that it got its red tone from the paint on the outside and not from the teaching staff on the inside.

Likewise in those unprogressive times, we thought the youth of the land should be taught to cherish the American flag for something besides private hating purposes. Hopefully old-fashioned, eh, what?

DRY SPELL FORCES FARMERS TO TURN TO CANNED GOODS

Wild Buying Reported; Additional Crop Loss Feared as Temperature Hits 100-117 Degrees.

OMAHA, Neb., July 26.—(AP)—

Farmers in the heart of the corn belt turned from the plow to the canopener today as drought cut off more and more of their normal food supply.

Stocks of canned vegetables were bought up with such speed in Nebraska and Iowa stores that brokers and wholesalers in Omaha described it as a "hysterical buying wave like a run on a bank."

Into the gloomy situation was injected fear of still greater losses to agriculture in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, where temperatures have sizzled between 100 and 117 degrees for weeks, while showers cooled other parts of the grain belt.

Of some cheer to Nebraska corn growers, who had despaired of saving any of their normal crop of 226,000,000 bushels, was the Chicago weatherman's forecast of local showers in some sections tomorrow.

The forecast said these rains would also scatter over Minnesota, Iowa, eastern and southern Kansas, northwestern Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, extreme northern Illinois and northern Indiana—much of the corn belt.

Cooler weather was promised the hard-bitten Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota.

The weather bureau advanced the opinion that the drought was "pretty well done away with" in the Ohio valley.

Elsewhere in the nation's farm center, however, the hot weather held its grip despite rains dotted here and there for the last 30 days. In the Chicago grain pits, corn prices rose again on the assumption that no rain could save the crop.

In Montana, the drought spread slowly westward, but showers reduced forest fire hazards.

Loyalist Crew Advances; Refugees Evacuate Gibraltar

Cannon fire raged furiously in the Straits of Gibraltar when six Spanish government warships attacked rebel forces at Ceuta, on the shore of Morocco. The photo at top shows the loyalist warship Miguel de Ceramics advancing into battle with the crew on deck giving the communist salute. Fearing an epidemic of disease from overcrowding, British authorities ordered Spanish refugees to leave Gibraltar and return to their revolution-torn country. WORLD WAR DEAD HONORED BY KING Edward Visits Vimy, France, To Dedicate Monument to Slain Vets.

By HENRY C. CASSIDY.

VIMY, France, July 26.—(AP)—

King Edward of England, standing bareheaded before a silent throng of pilgrims, unveiled a gleaming World War monument atop Vimy Ridge today as a symbol of British-Canadian French friendship and peace.

Extreme precautions were taken to protect the king, who less than two weeks ago rode into range of the loaded pistol of a discontented Briton.

Troops were lined up around the station when his train arrived, and no photographs were permitted. But as soon as he reached the monument, the king escaped his bodyguard and mingled among the pilgrims.

The anxious escort almost broke into a run trying to keep up with the monarch as he spoke and shook hands among the crowds, gathered to honor 64,000 Canadian World War dead.

"In dedicating this monument to our comrades who fell during the World War," he said, "we invoke the splendor of their sacrifice and the consecration of our affection for which rather than of the gunfire which battered this hill 20 years ago."

King Edward reached Vimy by train from Calais, to which he had crossed on the royal yacht Enchantress.

He was greeted by President Albert Lebrun, of France, and by nine cabinet members. With him were Alfred Duff Cooper, the British war minister, and Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for the Dominions.

President Lebrun, in welcoming the king, said:

"Through the shutters we saw about a hundred priests, fascists and others shot down, chiefly by children wearing red ties and red shirts."

"The children were between 14 and 17 years old. They carried pistols, rifles, axes and punchknives."

The whole Calais district and the Cate and Larioz, principal streets of Malaga, were reported completely destroyed; several hundred persons killed and more than 1,000 wounded.

American refugees from Malaga also told of seeing homes, clubs and shops owned by fascists and monarchists burned down by the frenzied leftists.

Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Boyce, of Boston.

The Boyces said the Church of Tortosa was destroyed.

Hundreds Reported Perished in Flames

LONDON, July 26.—(AP)—A Reuters (British) dispatch from Aden, Arabia, said travelers reported hundreds of persons had perished in a fire at Massawa, Eritrea.

The city was in flames, the travelers said, with newly erected gasoline tanks ablaze and the flames spreading to an ammunition magazine and to aircraft.

Already, 40 airplanes were said to have been destroyed.

Massawa, fortified city on the coast of the Italian colony of Eritrea, was the principal port for troops and war supplies during the Italo-Ethiopian war.

While volunteer leftist reinforcements poured into the lofty Gudar mountains, determined to make that mountain barrier to Madrid—a tomb of Spanish fascism—two columns of loyalists moved on Zaragoza, to the north, with the promise of continued aid by government aerial bombers.

Other forces stormed Seville, insurgent stronghold of the south of Spain.

(Rebels at the northern headquarters of Papiona, awaiting reinforcements from insurgent-led Morocco, said they would "starve out" the capital; that it might take a month.)

Leftists declared their mountain declared today they had perished through shutters of their locked hotel to see "children wearing red ties and red shirts" shoot down scores of fascists and priests.

"What is happening is savage and criminal," said one of the refugees who arrived last night aboard the British destroyer Brazen.

"Most of us were locked in our hotels for seven days in complete darkness."

"Through the shutters we saw about a hundred priests, fascists and others shot down, chiefly by children wearing red ties and red shirts."

Fight for Last Drink Brings Skull Fracture

An argument over a drink was given as the cause when Mary Smith, 25, negro, yesterday morning "sailed" out of a second-story window of her home at 213 1-2 Peters street, landing on her head and fracturing her skull.

Detectives R. T. Denny and Dick Englebert said they learned the negro woman and her husband, Henry, had been drinking and that they quarreled over who was to get the last drink. Henry is being sought. The Smith woman was taken to Grady hospital in serious condition.

DEAD OF WORLD WAR PAID TRIBUTE BY KING

King, expressed hope the "fellowship which the British and French democracies are unceasingly working to develop will bring still closer together in beneficent peace our peoples, working in the face of future uncertainties."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, of Canada, speaking by trans-Atlantic telephone, appealed to Europe for peace "as the only memorial worthy of the valor and sacrifice of those who gave their lives in the great war."

An absolute silence prevailed over a throng of more than 100,000 persons, assembled in the fields about the ridge, as the sovereign unveiled the memorial on the site captured by the Canadian forces, April 12, 1917, in the Battle of Arras.

As the king pulled the control cord, there emerged from the Canadian colors a Madonna-like figure in white stone, with bowed head. Behind the figure, representing Canada, rose two pylons, 138 feet high, dedicated to the Canadian and French armies.

At the top of the monument appeared statues of Peace, Justice, Truth and Knowledge and between the pylons a figure of sacrifice. At the base of the memorial ran a massive wall of defense, 257 feet long, on which were the names of 11,500 missing Canadian soldiers.

After the unveiling, the king's voice rang out in a speech broadcast to the crowd and relayed throughout the world.

Over a radius of five miles, his majesty's voice was the only sound to be heard. Airplanes were forbidden to fly within the wide circle of silence.

Nearly 10,000 of the spectators who stood respectfully at attention during the dedication were Canadian veterans who returned to this northeastern sector where their forces fought in the great war.

About 6,000 of them crossed from Canada in a chartered liner, others came from Great Britain and the continent.

King Edward made his first trip out of Britain since becoming king to conduct the ceremony. Although he visited Canada and accompanied the Canadian forces in France for a time when he was Prince of Wales, the ceremony marked the first time he had set foot on Canadian soil as sovereign.

The Vimy battlefield—240 acres surrounding the monument—was presented to Canada by France.

President Lebrun, who greeted King Edward, also came for his first time to Canadian soil.

The dedication culminated ten years of labor and an expenditure of about $1,000,000 on erection of the memorial. The work was completed after early delays in construction because of difficulties in finding the 7,000 to 8,000 tons of special stone required. The parchment-colored blocks, aver-

Commission Seeks Information on Control Exerted Over Companies.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—The Securities Commission will launch public hearings tomorrow in a broad investigation of investment trusts and investment companies.

Acting under congressional direction the commission already has conducted field studies and received returns to questionnaires in its inquiry into investment policies, relationships and activities of the trusts and companies.

The commission said in a statement that among other matters information would be sought at the hearings on "the control and influence exercised by investment trusts over companies in which the trusts are interested" and the influence exerted upon policies of trusts by interests affiliated with management of the trusts.

Contents of trusts portfolios, the volume of securities transactions and financial statements also will be examined.

The hearings will get under way with a study of some of the predecessor companies of the Equity Corporation of New York.

stances of transfer of power to enact laws from congress to administrative agencies.

The overlapping nature of the administrative agencies has resulted in great hardship and injustice," the committee contended. It cited the case of a radio station advertising food and drugs, which might "fall afoul of the Department of Agriculture, the Federal Trade Commission, the Postoffice Department and the Federal Communications Commission."

Some administrative bodies can even impose the equivalent of criminal penalties, the report added, mentioning fines which can be levied for violation of Treasury and Labor Department regulations.

NRA and AAA were termed "extreme examples" of delegated power, which can be levied for violation of the law.

An urgent recommendation that congressmen, federal officials, and officers of political organizations should be forbidden to practice before administrative agencies was included in the report.

at Christmas to drop gifts to the lonely outposts. He also has figured in countless other mercy errands.)

We were circling above the Queen Mary, slightly to the stern, when the accident occurred. The photographers were making their pictures. The rest of us were waving to passengers on the big ship. They waved back at us.

Then we went down, fast. The plane struck and started to sink. We climbed out through the cabin doors to the pontoons. Ramsdell was dragged out and held firmly against a pontoon.

The rough water threatened to swamp us momentarily. Then we saw a lifeboat from the Exermont. In the stern an officer shouted to us to "hang on." It seemed to be about 20 minutes from the time we struck the water until the boat reached us.

We helped the crew transfer Ramsdell to the boat and then we followed. The Queen Mary, after relaying the Exermont's message, sent radio instructions to the Exermont for treating the injured man.

The big ship, speeding toward New York with prospects of setting a new record for the westward crossing, did not stop but explained it had not found it necessary to do so because of the presence of the Exermont.

The crew of the Exermont gave us dry clothing and the ship started for its destination, New York, where we expect to dock shortly after noon tomorrow.

A plane from the coast guard base reached the Exermont at 9:35 p. m. (eastern daylight time) but, after a conference between coast guard officers and Captain Lundmark of the Exermont, it was decided that Ramsdell should be taken aboard the vessel until it reached New York.

WELL-TREATED.

Professor Clevenger was quoted by an Asheville reporter permitted to see him yesterday as saying: "I am being well treated. I have given the sheriff a detailed statement and we are going over it together. I'm not a detective, of course, but want to be helpful."

It was Professor Clevenger, an instructor in North Carolina State College, who found Helen Clevenger's body ten days ago when he went to her hotel room to take her to breakfast. The State Island, N. Y., girl had been traveling in the south with her uncle.

In Jail Since Friday.

He has been in jail since Friday, when he returned from Ohio, where he attended the funeral of his niece.

The move for Professor Clevenger's release was made yesterday by a brother, C. B. Clevenger, also an instructor at North Carolina State College. A lawyer was retained and a habeas corpus writ secured from Judge F. Donald Phillips.

After talking with the detained man, however, the lawyer and brother declined to use the writ, saying Clevenger told them he was remaining at the jail voluntarily and preferred to have no action taken.

C. B. Clevenger expressed to reporters his conviction that his brother is innocent of any connection with the killing.

"He's cheerful and wants to help in the investigation," C. B. Clevenger said. "Until there's an actual charge made there's no need for any proceedings. My brother is co-operating with them in all the evidence at hand."

Two Others Held.

Meanwhile Sheriff Brown, still holding two of seven persons detained for questioning in the case, said he expected no important development for three or four days.

Those in custody today were Daniel H. Gaddy, 28-year-old nightwatchman at the fashionable resort hotel (Battery Park) where the slaying took place, and L. D. Roddy, negro elevator operator of the hotel.

Brown declined to comment on the continued detention of Roddy but of Gaddy he said:

"He is the key to this whole mystery. He knows something and when he talks I think we will break this case."

The sheriff said Gaddy failed to punch his time clock for the second floor on his 1 a. m. round July 16, the morning the girl's pajama-clad body, shot and beaten about the face, was found in her room on that floor. It was approximately 8:20 a. m. that her uncle opened her door and reported the finding of her body. Officers estimated the time of the killing at about 1 a. m.

7 NEW POLIO CASESREPORTED IN ALABAMA

206 Stricken in State; Tennessee, Mississippi Record Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Seven new cases of infantile paralysis brought Alabama's list of stricken to 206 Sunday in a tri-state outbreak of the disease, but Tennessee and Mississippi reported no new diagnoses for a second successive day.

The malady has taken 16 lives, 12 in Alabama and four in Tennessee, since July 1. A total of 274 sufferers have been counted.

Jefferson (Birmingham) and Morgan counties contributed two new cases each to Alabama's list Sunday, while Cherokee, Lawrence and Shelby counties reported one each.

There were five new cases in Alabama Saturday, but Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer, said there was "no cause to become hysterical or panic-stricken." He pointed out the new case trend was below the 12-day average of two weeks ago.

Spread of the disease apparently was checked, at least temporarily, in Mississippi and Tennessee, health authorities agreed.

In Tennessee the number of cases increased from 39 to 55 during the week, but mostly they were scattered and some listed as "sporadic." In Mississippi only two new sufferers were reported during the week and Sunday the list of stricken remained at 15.

Dr. Baker stressed "complete rest" for sufferers and said one of the main points in all treatments was to prevent the patient exercising himself in the least for weeks.

"The nasal spray," the health officer said, "should be secured from a druggist and administered by a physician the first time. It is a solution of powerful chemicals and should be used with care and medical advice."

about 8 o'clock yesterday morning at Whitehall and Windsor streets. Charges of being drunk and disorderly conduct were also placed against her. According to police reports, the false alarm was sounded at Whitehall and Windsor streets a short time before her arrest.

M'PHERSON MAN HELDON BURGLARY CHARGE

Captured a short time after he allegedly ransacked the home of J. S. Richardson at 161 Georgia avenue, a man listed as L. V. Sampson, 25, of Fort McPherson, was arrested on a charge of burglary early yesterday morning by Radio Patrolmen R. V. Paschal and Ed Payne at Central avenue, near Crumley street.

Richardson told police he noticed a window open when he returned home and he flashed a light into the house. He said he saw Sampson run out the rear door. He gave police a description and the suspect was picked up. No loot was taken, although drawers had been ransacked, according to police reports.

NEGRO HELD IN THEFTOF AUTO ACCESSORIES

Several tires and radios, allegedly stolen from automobiles here, were recovered in Newnan yesterday when police arrested a negro listed as Arthur Gay, 25, of a Rhodes street address, on a charge of suspicion, in that city.

He was picked up in Newnan last Friday, and arrested yesterday by Detectives S. W. Roper and H. L. Sexton, who said he allegedly stripped cars, selling tires and radios for low amounts. Police said Gay has a criminal record.

CAPTIVE HITS OFFICERAND CAR IS WRECKED

Losing control of an automobile when he was allegedly struck on the head by a youth who was being taken into custody on a charge of driving while intoxicated, Radio Patrolman George G. Caldwell was injured early yesterday morning when the car crashed into an abutment on Butler street, near the underpass.

According to police reports, the officer was struck by a youth listed as Eugene Sherlin, 20, of 968 Allene avenue. The officer driving Sherlin's car. Patrolman Caldwell was treated at Grady hospital for cuts of the face and injuries to the chest.

fense of Madrid had left 2,000 rebels dead or wounded in the Guadarrama.

Women Mobilized. Amid comparative order, the Madrid government mobilized a regiment of militant women to "fight the assassins of their fathers and brothers." Officials claimed there was no shortage of food, milk or gasoline.

In the loyalist forces marching on Zaragoza, too, was the anarchist mother of five children, Libertad Rodenas.

(United States and other foreign refugees continued to pour into Gibraltar, France and Portugal. With 11 destitute American athletes reported escaping from Barcelona, the American Olympic committee issued a new call for help, the Washington State Department reported.

(Those refugees who reached Gibraltar from burned and looted Malaga told tales of how red-shirted children shot down "about a hundred" priests, priests and others in the streets. Similar, unconfirmed, reports were heard in Lisbon from Portuguese refugees.)

Government technicians sought to restore communications with various southern cities, out of virtually every street was "shocking." Gustavus General Francisco Franco's widespread revolt flared out of Spanish Morocco last Friday.

ASCENDING TERRITORY

Reports reaching Casablanca, French Morocco, from the Spanish zone said firing squads and the iron rule of fascist rebels had spread terror throughout the populace. Even Franco, the advisers said, went about heavily guarded, apparently fearing for his life. Some believed he might set up a permanent, independent regime in Morocco, should his mainland armies fail.

More politicians appeared on the streets of Madrid, but 161 Americans remained sheltered in their embassy. Barcelona, like the capital, was reported free from disorder.

The Washington State Department announced Consul Lynn W. Franklin, at Barcelona, reporting "all communication is threatened," suggested the cruiser Quincy be sent there. The Quincy today was at Gibraltar, en route to Malaga. Sixty Americans fled to Barcelona yesterday on the American export liner Exeter.

British warships at Marseille disembarked 300 other refugees, of various nationalities from Barcelona. From Madrid, the loyalist recruits rushed toward the Guadarrama range to join militiamen and loyal guards who so far have held the passes with big guns, bombing planes and infantry charges.

General Jose Costello, the war minister, also left for the mountains to cheer the defense columns.

Carrying the offensive to the fascist revolutionaries other government forces stormed Seville, in the south, and Zaragoza, in the north, with new vigor.

Two days of constant aerial bombings precipitated the fall of Albacete.

Royal German Asks Anne

How She Let Husband Fly Atlantic.

POTS DAM, July 26.—(AP)—Germany's former crown prince, who once flew with the Wright brothers, and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who spanned the Atlantic, met today at historic Cecilienhof castle.

On urgent invitation of the prince, Frederick Wilhelm, the Lindberghs motored early this morning to the romantic castle—to be greeted at the door by an exuberant host, every inch the sportsman, deeply tanned and in light summer suit.

"I've been wanting to know you a long time," hailed the prince. "I suppose everybody asks you how did you do it?" referring to the Paris flight. Colonel Lindbergh gave a hearty chuckle.

Whoop, Prince Frederick beamed to Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow.

"How did you ever let him do it?" smiled the colonel.

"She didn't even know me then," Formal presentations were then in order. Prince Louis Ferdinand, son of Frederick, introduced other members of the party of nine—members of the American embassy.

FRANCE REFUSES TO SELLMUNITIONS TO REBELS

PARIS, July 26.—(AP)—France's popular front government denied actual arms and ammunition to Spain's leftist government today, but officials said Madrid would be permitted to buy planes and motor trucks in this country.

Hispanic sources pointed out such equipment could be used for warfare against fascist rebels, once it reaches Spain.

A Spanish plane, which brought 11,000,000 francs in gold (about $725,000) to Paris, presumably to pay for government equipment purchases, started back to Spain.

The government here, officially adopting neutrality in Spain's civil war, kept a close watch on Spanish refugees to prevent them from plotting on French soil.

The rightists Jose Maria Gil Robles, former Spanish minister of war, and Juan March, whose arrest French leftist groups have been demanding, were reported safely out of France and headed for Lisbon, Portugal.

Police announced Gil Robles left Boulogne last night on the liner Avila Star, other sources said March accompanied him.

Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro instructed frontier officials to watch refugees coming across the border to see they bore no arms in France. Officials were ordered particularly to keep suspected plotters under surveillance.

The French liner Gouverneur General Cambon arrived at Marseilles with 156 refugees of various nationalities from the Balearic Islands.

They said government planes had bombed the village of Inca without casualties yesterday.

FASCIST VICTORY CLAIMED BY REBELS WITH THE REBEL FORCES AT PAMPLONA, Spain, July 26.—(AP)—The rebel army junta claimed a fascist victory in the mountains of Guadarrama today.

The victory, insurgent officers said, was executed by the advance column of General Emilio Mola's forces.

It also was announced that two Madrid infantry regiments had rebelled, joining Mola's fighters.

The junta, in a proclamation, declared there would be "no reprisals" when the fascists seize power in Spain.

Mola's slow progress toward Madrid was explained by rebel officers as dictated by the necessity of waiting for the southern armies of General Francisco Franco to approach closer to the capital.

Hispanic forces now were said to be 90 kilometers (56 miles) from Madrid.

General Miguel Cabanellas, head of the provisional fascist government in Burgos, reviewed rebel troops today on a flag-bedecked plaza here.

The white-bearded old fighter moved up and down the closely drawn ranks of rebel soldiers, militiamen and Red Cross nurses, all drawn up at rigid attention, indicative of the iron discipline of Spain's fascist provinces.

"Viva Espana! Viva General Cabanellas," echoed from the walls of the houses around the plaza.

Pamplona and Navarre were in holiday mood, with fascist confidence apparent everywhere. The question was not "will we win?" but "when will we be in Madrid?"

Some fascist leaders answered "in three days." Others thought it might take a month.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 27, 1936.

RAYON AND COTTON

The manufacture of rayon on a commercial scale began in the United States 25 years ago, and by 1921 it had become a widely recognized textile, consumption totaling around 20,000,000 pounds. The 1935 volume of all textile fiber consumption was greater than in 1921, but rayon's growth out-distanced others, being 1,000 per cent, as compared with six per cent for cotton, 17 per cent for wool and 47 per cent for silk.

The superior qualities of the different kinds of improved rayon, and its adaptability in fashioning various fabrics have made it highly popular, and the inroads it has made on the use of cotton, silk and wool have been the cause of some alarm among the producers of these commodities, especially cotton.

In this connection it is noted that experiments made by Dr. Frank Cameron and a group of associates at the University of North Carolina, in which pure white samples of alpha cellulose, suitable for making rayon from cotton were produced, would appear to point to a time when more cotton than now will be used in rayon manufacture.

Rayon is made from the cellulose of spruce wood and of cotton linters, or from a combination of the cellulose from these two sources, cellulose being the fundamental material of the structure of plants; so Dr. Hamilton's suggestion of planting cotton broadcast, mowing to the earth by machinery, and using both stalk and boll in providing cellulose for rayon, appears feasible.

Before rayon came into being we were dependent upon animal and plant life for yarns from which to create fabrics.

Rayon is a man-made yarn, and every step in its creation is controlled according to the methods developed by constant experiments under the direction of trained scientists. Hence it is possible to make it uniform as to quality, of fine or coarse filaments, short lengths or long, lustrous or dull. Man is doing synthetically what the silk worm does naturally—taking the cellulose out of spruce wood and cotton and spinning it into thread.

By various chemical processes the cellulose of spruce wood and cotton is converted into a liquid which has about the same viscosity as castor oil. In this form it is forced through a spinnerette which contains minute holes. From these holes the rayon comes out in the form of continuous filaments, which compose rayon yarn. The size of the spinnerette holes may be changed at will to produce any size yarn desired. During the stage when the cellulose is in a liquid condition it may be chemically treated so that the substance itself may be greatly modified, permitting the creation of various colors, or the emanation of a lustrous or bright thread.

One of the significant changes between early and present-day rayon, achieved by scientific control, is strength and uniformity, and now rayon is regarded as the most uniform of any yarn made. Earlier uses of rayon were principally as a substitute for silks and satins, but with improvements over the years, and the development of coarse yarns, it is now used for fabrics of all kinds. Its low cost and general excellence are finding favor with the consumer. Continued increase in its use appears certain and southern cotton growers will watch with interest development of Dr. Cameron's experiments, which may tend to decrease the use of spruce wood in favor of the now useless cotton stalk.

"Death to English" New Cry.

Until May this year, the British authorities in the Holy Land looked upon the successive waves of violence in Jewish Palestine as a sort of family quarrel between Arabs and Jews in which the government was called upon to hold the balance and perform the role of arbiter between two groups of troublesome "natives." This fiction no longer holds water.

The campaign of civil disobedience and non-cooperation ushered in by the Arab leadership in that month stamps the government as the national enemy who must be combated and, if possible, driven out.

The Jews therewith removed from the center of the stage, to a certain extent. The mandatory government is forced to battle for its own cause. Its first act upon being confronted with the civil disobedience movement was to have the signers of the manifesto arrested, only to set them free the next day after finding them 25 pounds. A Jewish motor-bus driver was arrested the same day for having a revolver under the seat of his bus, got off with a month's imprisonment and 50 pounds of a fine.

This is but one incident in a policy of measuring with two measures which started in 1920, when Emanuel Broner, a citizen of Motha and the owner of a small canning factory there, after seeing his family murdered by a horde of 200 Arabs, took refuge in a house across the road and had the audacity to point a rifle at the Arabs, who made ready to attack him. The Arabs, whose home was in Lifta, a village notorious even in Turkish days for lawlessness, altogether, a collective fine for the murder of three persons. Mr. Broner, the man whose wife and children had been slaughtered, was now being taken along there for having pointed that rifle. I saw him in the cage later.

Jews may not defend themselves, the military and the police are sworn to keep order. The Jews are given a dozen rifles or so, which were given to the colonists of outlying Jewish agricultural settlements by the government. The settlers are now defenseless if a sudden raid were staged.

The military is entirely on the defensive. Detachments of troops are thrown somewhere or a set of houses goes up in flame, but the troops do not prevent such excesses. The attacks are full of horror. If it comes to battles between the soldiers and marauding bands of Arabs, nothing is ever known of the casualties on the Arab side, because they are dead and wounded, taking along their dead and wounded.

"PIGS IS PIGS"

The above ungrammatical title to a humorous story of a past generation may appropriately apply to the satisfactory increase being made in Georgia hog production, an industry in which the state has been woefully deficient and which still has room for steady advancement in years to come.

The crop reporting service, operated co-operatively by the federal government and the extension department of the State Agricultural College, discloses that Georgia's 1936 spring pig crop is 10 per cent larger than in 1935 and 15 per cent greater than in 1934. This is compared with a 25 per cent increase in the nation's spring pig crop of 1935.

In this connection it is but fair to observe that the campaign for increased hog production in Georgia has been productive of results only since farmers in general abandoned the all-cotton program and began to diversify their farming activities. Whereas, in the midwest corn-hog belt, hog production has been a principal farm industry for the past half century. Georgia farmers are "growing" into the hog production industry along safe lines, and the recorded increase may be regarded as highly satisfactory.

The number of sows farrowed this spring in Georgia shows an increase of 13 per cent over last year and 12 per cent over two years ago. The pigs that were saved are estimated to be 924,000 head, compared with 842,000 in the spring of 1935 and 806,000 in 1934. Spring pigs are those farrowed between December 1 and June 1. The indicated number of sows to farrow in Georgia from June 1 to December 1 is placed at 142,000, as compared with 119,000 one year ago.

Recent statistics disclose that Georgia is importing 65 per cent of the pork and lard consumed within the state, so it is evident that increased hog production may continue over a period of years before the state is self-sufficient in this one particular item and arrives at a point where it may become an exporter.

Despite the drought which has seriously affected Georgia agriculture this year, statistics disclose that, year in and year out, over any period that may be selected, Georgia is less affected by this species of nature's freak weather than any other part of the country. That being an indisputable fact, the state is a favorable section for expansion of the swine industry, having ample land unsuitable for close cropping which may be made into permanent pastures, and still other acres on which to produce feedstuffs for fattening and final finishing.

Numerous hog markets have been established in various sections of the state where farmers may sell their finished porkers at good prices all seasons in the year; in addition to which the state now has five major packing plants, operated by the great corporations of the north, with capacity ample for the present supply of slaughter animals, and these companies have indicated a willingness to add to their plants as rapidly as the supply demands.

The progressive Georgia farmer will note these facts and gradually increase his production of hogs, thus keeping within the state a huge sum of money that is now going out without a compensating return.

If the latest addition to the Dionne household breaks into the films, it will have to be on merit.

Talmudic Tales

FOODS.

The Talmud teaches us to say on the subject of foods and health: "Fruit, cabbage and all green stuff—when ripe—are wholesome. Soft boiled eggs are commendable. Turnips are good for your health, they never eat yourself full and lie down to sleep immediately after a meal."

"The egg," said Rabbi Janai, "is better than anything that equals the size of an egg."

"Cabbage is healthful food for most persons; beetroot is good for medicinal use, but woe unto the host who turns up his nose at the turnip. Turnips cause a gastro intestinal disturbance in some persons, which may have been the way they affected the sage, Rebbe Eliezer."

The best cure for a bad dream is a day's fishing."

The average man is honest and, being straightforward himself, he is slow to suspect another of deliberate falsehood. So, when the unscrupulous candidate gets up on the stump, all he has to do is to say what will please the greatest number of his listeners, whether that statement happens to be true or not. Just say with a slight tinge of plausibility and ample vehemence and the majority of your hearers, not realizing you are a crook, will accept it as a true statement from one honest man to another.

On the other hand, the honest candidate who tries always to keep his acts straight and to advocate only what is wise, irrespective of its popularity, is hopelessly handicapped in his campaign against the demagogue. The voters, hearing the two speeches, take the side of the one making the greatest claims and offering the rosiest future, and never stop to question whether the claims are true or whether the gridded pledges are possible of fulfillment.

No sucker would buy an interest in Brooklyn bridge if he did not really believe the faker owned it. Likewise no one would believe it possible to spend more public money on schools, roads, public health and all the other functions of modern government if he did not wish to believe and accept the promise of the candidate who doesn't care whether it is possible or not, so long as he gets the ballots.

And the politician who voters who, in the first place, can sift the truth in the candidate's record as it is being made, and, secondly, can remember that record when it becomes time to vote again, is relatively small.

Depending on Poor Memories.

Thus the officeholder who has already betrayed the people's trust and has used his office to advance his own fortunes instead of remembering he is only a servant of the people, can go on the stump and, completely ignoring the truth, make loud statements about the political situation. There is a name already waiting for that distant day, when it comes. It will be called the Millennium.

Revolutionary War.

The United States declared war on Great Britain in 1812. The senate had divided 19 to 13; the house 79 to 49. New England threatened to secede. There were anti-war riots in New York, Baltimore and other cities. Authorities in various places blocked preparedness measures.

Yet this was the war which established United States independence. It was what Benjamin Franklin had anticipated when he reproved a pessimist who said, "The Revolution; the war of independence is yet to come. It was a war for independence, but not of independence."

FAIR ENOUGH

ONLY RESPONSIBILITY WAS TO SHOW UP.
ROCKLAND, Me., July 25.—What sort of Sunday school outing is this Olympic expedition of the free Americans, that a lot of male Aunt Betties are permitted to put their heads together, smacking their lips over a bit of scandal and dirty up the name of a decent young married woman with a public order of dismissal for drinking?

She, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, who has been drummed out of camp by the old ladies of both sexes in charge of the American team, is a champion swimmer and about the most attractive human being in all respects that ever wore the American shield in Olympic competition. Her husband is a band leader and band leaders work in night clubs. She probably met him in a night club in the first place and since their marriage she has gone trouping with him and spent some time around night clubs herself. Her only responsibility to the Olympic team was to show up for the races sober and to do her best, both of which she was sure to do when she came and both of which she did within the last few weeks to win her place on the team for the third time in succession.

Eleanor is no child and the Olympic team is no boarding school. She is an old campaigner as athletes go and when a player has been competing up in the championship brackets for eight years the individual develops some personal ideas on training. The ordeal of training is not so hard the first few years but after that it becomes not only a terrific bore to a person of any spirit but physical drudgery as well. I was talking the other evening with the father of a young woman who swam with our 1932 Olympic team in Los Angeles but passed up this year's competitions even though she still makes Olympic time against the watch. He said he talked her out of this year's trials because she is at an age when she ought to have fun and the previous experience had shown that Olympic competition is a great strain over a period of a year or more and not worth the sacrifice.

ELEANOR NOT FIRST TO BREAK TRAINING.

Eleanor Jarrett is not the first great athlete to break training with a loud crash and she bespeaks a line of thought on athletic training which has been justified by spectacular successes of athletes who will be remembered long after Avery Brundage's own performances in competitive sport have been forgotten. In fact, Mr. Brundage's performances as an example of the milk and spinach system of training were forgotten a long time ago. It probably will surprise you to know that he was once an all-around track and field star himself.

Jim Corbett broke training on champagne whenever he found himself too fine drawn and, from all accounts, got cockeyed, just to relax. Then he would tighten up again as ringtime approached, timing his condition by his own knowledge of himself. Babe Ruth once went on the wagon for 10 days at the height of his career and didn't hit as much as a pop foul until he stayed out all night, reported for work with a hangover that almost filled the park and hit three home runs in one game.

Grebb, the greatest fighter of his time and one of the three or four best that ever lived, was a bottled-up champion, and Mickey Walker, who was almost as good, went on year after year flouting the rules which Brundage arbitrarily laid down for Mrs. Jarrett just because they suited his own rather Babbalanian temperament more than 20 years ago.

SHOULD THROW PARTY FOR WHOLE TEAM.

Back in the early days of American Olympic competition our teams included some full-grown men who drank when as and if they pleased and ate corned beef and cabbage and won their events without benefit of curfew, caloric tables or chaperonage. Adult men and women are entitled to the same rights today and the babying and tut-tutting imposed on people who are old enough to vote and bear arms or children by the A. A. Staggs and Fielding Y. Vost school of athletics is an arrogant form of snooperism.

If there are children on the Olympic team and if Mr. Brundage must act the part of a male governess, he can work out on them. And if he thinks it is a new experience for an American child to see a grown woman feeling a little bit high, that just shows he doesn't get around much. The American child has seen his or her own mother with a snootful is known by the name of legion.

Eleanor is all right and judging by her marks in the trials it would be a swell idea to find out what kind of wine she was drinking and throw a party for the whole team.

Why Demagoguery Is So Successful.

The reason why political demagogues so frequently win at the polls is, after all, very elementary. It is that they are able to come and close out their accounts. Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady has ruled that, unless this money is collected by September 2, it will accrue to the stockholders.

Among the missing depositors is W. F. Edmiston, who has $1,348 waiting for him.

Does Anybody Know Mr. Edmiston?

Ten years ago the Security Savings Bank, of Waukegan, Ill., closed its doors. In due course the receivers "took charge" of the bank and now ready to make the final windup of the affairs of the defunct bank.

In their hands is a sum approximating $10,000, property of about 1,000 depositors who have been waiting to come and close out their accounts. Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady has ruled that, unless this money is collected by September 2, it will accrue to the stockholders.

Army Balloon.

Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, 20, made the first flight for military purposes in 1861, and in 1862, rising in a balloon near Washington to take observations for the Union army of the Potomac, and from it transmitted the first telegraph message from the air to President Lincoln.

Military authorities didn't see the value to either the balloon of aerial telegraph messages, and Lowe quit the army long before the war was over, to turn his hand to the invention of one of the first mechanical ice boxes.

But the Lowe flights served a notable purpose: Count Zeppelin, 24-year-old German army observer with the Union army, made his first balloon ascension in a Lowe craft, and got his idea for airships while watching artillery fire being directed from a Lowe blimp.

Bastille Fall.

The Bastille fell July 14, 1789, an event commemorated ever afterward by Frenchmen as liberty day. Yet the Bastille wasn't destroyed that day, there were no political prisoners in it to be freed, and Louis XVI continued to rule for three years longer. Instead of the hundreds of sufferers from tyranny which the mob expected to find in the Bastille, there were only seven inmates, and none were political offenders.

Napoleon's Fall.

Exactly one year after the lord mayor of London gave a $125,000 dinner to the rulers of Britain, Russia and Prussia to celebrate the downfall of Napoleon in 1815, on the battle of Waterloo—which was fought at the Waterloo in Belgium, not the Hare Sainte, some distance south of Waterloo, and none of the action took place within the environs of Waterloo.

DUMEIRA

Italy's Gibraltar

In the free-for-all game of modern diplomacy, islands are valuable pawns which may become aviation or naval stations. Their potential importance recently has brought into the spotlight tiny Dumeira Island, Italy's Gibraltar of the Red Sea's southern gateway, the Strait of Bab el Mandeb or the Gate of Tears.

"While smaller than a mile in any dimension, Dumeira is valuable to Italy because of its strategic location," says a bulletin from Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "It is about 13 miles northwest of Perim, British fortified island which as part of the protectorate of Aden, helps Britannia rule the waves at the entrance of the Red sea."

Former Boundary.
"To a hovein: aviator Dumeira resembles a huge dark hydroplane facing east, moored less than a half-mile off the desolate coast of Eritrea. Its broad 'wings' taper landward into a narrowing tail."

"To a sailor, even in hazy weather, it appears as a camel's back with double hump rising conspicuously from green waves that hide sinister shoals. From among the rocks blend with the bluffs of Cape Dumeira on the mainland."

"Until a year and a half ago Dumeira served the purpose of holding up one end of the boundary line between Eritrea and French Somaliland. The boundary landmark has been discarded, however, since France transferred her share of the island to Italy early in 1935."

"The island's best anchorage, near its western point, is conveniently near Eritrea's shore, hidden from Perim. Beams from the latter's lighthouse are ordinarily visible from Dumeira."

Duelling Distance.
"These two islands, the old British bulwark and the new Italian police pup, are lined up at duelling distance from one of the hottest coasts in the world. Africa's barren shore jags jaggedly into precipitous mountains of bare rock. It has been called the 'country where the devil did not dare build his hell.'"

It is difficult to believe that in prehistoric times this blasted area may have been joined to Arabia by a well-watered and wooded isthmus, of which Dumeira and Perim are only stripped and stark remains.

"There are two navigation lanes in Bab el Mandeb. Dumeira is equipped by location to be a stumbling block in the larger and more generally used channel. Even without tidal forces, irregular tides and gusty winds make the strait a gamble for inexperienced sailors. A Lloyd's station on Perim supplies danger signals to passing ships to avoid having to pay insurance on wrecks. When the Portuguese of Albuquerque entered the Red sea in 1513, one of the first Europeans to pass the 'Gate of Tears,' he had to pass a local pilot by force or fraud, although he had safely sailed around the Cape of Good Hope."

"In those days Dumeira was too insignificant to be claimed specifically by any government. When Roman ships sailed past its shores and shoals and Arabian spices, frankincense, myrrh, the island was presumably ruled by the local king of the Assamites."

Dumeira's transfer to complete Italian jurisdiction was so quietly made that its significance was scarcely realized by spectator nations. Now it is compared by some chroniclers to England's transfer to Germany of Heligoland, small North Sea island which "later" served as an important naval base."

Lincoln's Reply.

Abraham Lincoln wrote a celebrated letter in 1836. Replying to a political opponent, he wrote from New Salem, Illinois:

"Dear Colonel: I am told that during my absence last week you were through this place and saw me publicly that you were in possession of facts which, if known to the public, would destroy the prospects of N. W. Edwards and myself at the coming election, but that through favor to us you would forbear to divulge them."

"No one has needed more favors than I, and generally few have been unwilling to accept them, but in this case favor to me would be injustice to the public, and therefore, I must beg your pardon for declining it."

If I have done anything, either by design or misadventure, which, if known, would subject me to forfeiture of the confidence (as Sangamon county clerk) that thing and I conceal it, he is a traitor to his country."

"I here assure you that the candid statement of the facts on your part, however low it may sink me or distress never break the ties of personal friendship between us."

William Pepperell.

William Pepperell was born in 1806 in Kittery, Maine, where he grew up to become a rich merchant and the leader of the Maine men who accomplished the greatest feat of arms in colonial America. He won Canada for Britain. At the time of the French and Indian war, Louisiana, on Cape Breton, dominated the entrance to the St. Lawrence river, and was the key to the French possessions in America.

So much money and engineering skill had been devoted to its defense that it was considered impregnable and the Gibraltar of America. Veteran French troops manned it.

Pepperell's army, made up of fishermen and farmers, inexperienced except in Indian skirmishing, marched overland under the Pine Tree flag, and in a bloody siege captured the town, succeeded in capturing the city while a blockading British fleet prevented reinforcements from reaching the garrison. The loss of Louisiana led France to give up Canada.

Income Taxes.

Everybody went to work for the federal government in 1862. On the 71st anniversary of the imposition of the first federal taxes (on distilled spirits and carriages) upon citizens of the United States, the first taxes were laid upon incomes and tobacco and the Internal Revenue Bureau was created. The income levy extended to all incomes over $600 a year, including those of federal officials and employees.

The extraordinary thing about these taxes was that they were repealed. An supreme court even ruled income taxes unconstitutional.

Piracy Was a Virtue While Men Called It Preying on the Enemy

BY ROBERT QUILEN.

Bill Jones is a soft-spoken, evangelistic patriot who thinks his town the ideal community in America. "A spirit of brotherhood and usefulness," says he, "transformed from a country village to a thriving industrial city in less than 20 years. We do not try to get as much as possible and give as little as possible in return, but to do our best for the common good and find happiness in useful service. That's our slogan."

"And since political intrigue is always a disturbing element, we do courage it and thus manage our affairs without conflict or a strife."

Bill is quite sincere about it, but he sees his Eden through tinted glasses. He has an interest in most of the town's industries and gets much of the cream. The gospel of useful service and brotherhood and contented co-operation prevents any clamor for higher wages.

Freedom from sordid political strife is also a good thing for Bill. It enables him and a few other "big shots" to run things without interference by unwashed trouble-makers.

The Anglo-Saxon is a curious animal. He cannot be happy until he feels noble. And since he is incapable of maintaining a constant nobility, he has learned to satisfy his conscience by kidding himself.

He does the thing that serves his interests, as men of all races, and then he thinks up a noble reason for doing it. You will recall, for example, a certain war to end war. Even slavery was stoutly defended as a noble system, supported by Scripture and beneficial to the African savage.

It would be a harmless vanity, except for the fact that it prevents progress. There is nothing else so hard to uproot as the evil works of the self-righteous.

The sinner can't be saved until he is convicted of sin, and how can he be convicted of sin if he thinks his vice a virtue?

Colonel Sandino, commander of the Barcelona air force, reported loyal airmen had established a base at Alarida to support the attack of the two columns on Zaragoza.

Ten Planes Ready.

Ten bombing planes and 100 aviators already have arrived there, Sandino announced.

Barcelona itself was free from disorders, with street cars, buses and subway trains resuming operations and dock workers again unloading ships.

President Luis Companys, of Catalonia, broadcast a warning to the people of Barcelona to "guard against acts which would dishonor the revolution and weaken the character of our fight."

"We must watch for disguised enemies who mingle among groups inspired by passion for the revolution who desire to increase the horror of the struggle and incite the people in order to nullify our heroic effort," Companys said.

"Guard Our Honor."

"Citizens! We must guard the honor of the revolution."

The anarchist agitator, Libertad Rodenas, the mother of five children, was believed by passion for the revolution to have been in the anti-fascist militia on Zaragoza.

Francisco Cambo, regionalist leader, who has been missing for several days, was reported aboard his yacht in the Adriatic after sending all the valuables from his Barcelona villa to London several days before the revolution broke out.

Claire Trevor Starred

With Claire Trevor in the starring role, "Human Cargo," fast-moving and exciting film, opened yesterday at the Capitol theater for a week's run.

The feature is well augmented by a banner stage show, a revue with a host of pretty girls and plenty of fine variety entertainment. The stage offering is "Let's Have a Party."

"Human Cargo" tells the story of a society detective whose search for thrills leads her to get a job as a reporter on a newspaper. Her first assignment finds her mixed up in an alien smuggling ring.

Brian Donlevy is co-starred with Miss Trevor, who is fast gaining great popularity with film fans, and the supporting cast includes Ralph Morgan, Alan Dinehart and many others.

The direction and photography are of high order, and the film is unusually well cast.

The stage show is beautifully costumed and scenic effects add to the general high standard. The feature acts include Gene Gory and Roberta, dancers; Billy Raymond and Company, blackface comedians; Jackson and Blackwell, acrobatic specialty performers; Denise Brunau, glass-balancing novelty, and Shirley Winters, songstress.

Faith Carlton and her music are the visiting musical group, while Enrico Leide's Capitolians do their stuff as usual.

AIR FLIVVER NEARS FAMILY GARAGE

At Popular Prices, Bureau Says

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—Two years of development work were declared today by the Bureau of Air Commerce to have sent the air flivver soaring well along toward the popular-price goal.

Six types of experimental planes, including an autogyro, were reported to be in actual use by bureau officials to test the air flivver under test prior to delivery in the near future. Companion projects which included development of engines for wings and propellers, non-freezing carburetors, an adaptation of automobile engines for light aircraft were completed or proceeding satisfactorily, the bureau said.

To date, the bureau has accepted three planes, all of which have pusher-type propellers and three-wheel landing gear, and an all-metal, low-wing conventional type monoplane. Delivery was expected in the near future on an open-cockpit, low-wing monoplane.

Detective McCrary Brings

Howe Back After Arrest in Chicago

Harry P. Howe, sought in connection with the brutal slaying of his wife, Mrs. Hattie Howe, whose mutilated body was found near Dallas, Ga., last April 26, was returned to this city from Chicago yesterday morning in custody of Detective Lieutenant C. E. McCrary.

Howe neither admitted nor denied the murder, according to Detective Lieutenant McCrary, and was lodged in Fulton tower on a charge of "jumping" a $1,000 bond on a liquor charge on which he was arrested several weeks before the alleged murder.

Detective Lieutenant McCrary said Howe was arrested in a rooming house and had been in Chicago for about six weeks. Howe told police he had also been in Louisville and Cincinnati, narrowly missing arrest in those cities. He will be turned over to Paulding county authorities following his arraignment on the bond "jumping" charge.

FOR LONG LOST NUNOCHA

TAMPA, Fla., July 26.—(AP)—Although little hope remained, coast guard craft tonight ceaselessly combed the Caribbean sea and Gulf of Mexico for the motorship Nunocha, missing since it left Grand Cayman island for Tampa July 4 with 22 persons aboard.

Finding of oil drums, charred wreckage and a life raft only heightened the mystery since none of these objects cast up from the sea could be positively connected with the vanished ship.

The life raft was found on Key Largo, in the Florida Keys but Captain Sam Henning whose wife and child were on the Nunocha viewed it and said he could not identify it as belonging to the ship.

BROOKHART MAY HEAD

NEW POLITICAL PARTY

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 26.—(AP)—Iowa's newest political party, the farmer-laborites, remained in doubt today whether Smith Wildman Brookhart would accept its proffered senatorial nomination.

The former United States senator, now in Washington, was represented as being noncommittal as to whether he would consent to run for the unexpired term of the late Senator Louis Murphy, Dubuque democrat. He was quoted as saying he wanted to study the matter and "see what it all means."

Farmer-laborites meeting here yesterday named the long-time foe of "Wall Street's moneyed interests and stock gamblers" as their candidate.

ANGEL L. CUESTA SR.

DIES AT TAMPA HOME

Former Atlantan, Cigar Magnate, Succumbs to Pneumonia in 78th Year.

Angel L. Cuesta Sr., one of the founders of the cigar industry in the United States and a former Atlantan, died yesterday at his home in Tampa of an attack of bronchial pneumonia. He was 77 and had been a resident there since 1894, following his removal from Atlanta.

A native of Pinar, Spain, Mr. Cuesta had been decorated three times by Alfonso XIII, former king of Spain, and was a don. His civic activities in Tampa, Havana and his native Spain were wide and varied.

Mr. Cuesta came to Atlanta in 1884 and a short time later founded the Cuesta Rey Cigar Company, establishing a factory at Five Points.

In 1888 he married the former Miss Mary Binder, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Binder, prominent Atlantans.

Upon his removal to Tampa, Mr. Cuesta organized the Cuesta Rey factory at Tampa and this was followed by the Gonzalez-Sanchez factory at Jacksonville, and the El Mundo del Rey factory at Havana. Nearly 1,000 workers are employed in the combined factories.

Mr. Cuesta had been in declining health since a stroke of paralysis suffered 12 years ago, but he had maintained contact with his business interests, although his two sons were in active management.

Mr. Cuesta is survived by his wife; his two sons, A. L. Cuesta Jr. and Carl Bernardo Cuesta, and a daughter, Mrs. Carlotta Kirkaby, of Chicago. The funeral services will be held tomorrow in Tampa.

FIRE DESTROYS CHURCH.

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—A five-alarm fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Roman Catholic church, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel, in the Bronx early today. Three priests from the nearby rectory fought their way through flames to carry out all the sacred vessels and vestments from the sanctuary.

BRITISH BUS ATTACKED; TWELVE ARABS KILLED

JERUSALEM, July 26.—(AP)—Twelve Arabs were reported killed today in a fight with British troops in the hills of Judea after an attempted ambush of a bus with convoy en route to Tel Aviv.

A British soldier was slightly injured but bus passengers were not hurt. Airplanes came to aid of the convoy and bombed a forest into which the Arabs fled.

At Boston's Parker House they know good food and good tobacco

Back in the ample kitchen, the chef beams over a Planked Sirloin Steak à la Parker, named, like the famous rolls, after the historic Parker House in Boston. Camels are first choice here. Martin J. Lavin, banquet manager of the Parker House, is impressed with the outstanding popularity of Camels. "Camels are the favorite cigarette of those who love good food," he points out. "Camels are first choice at the Parker House at banquets, dinners, and luncheons."

SMALL BUT SPEEDY. Many a more powerful rival has fallen before the whirlwind speed and stamina of petite Mrs. Ethel Arnold. She smokes a lot—Camels, of course. "I smoke Camels with my meals," says this tennis ace. "I find I enjoy my food more and digest it better too. And smoking Camels doesn't upset my nerves. Camels are so delightfully mild."

Those who enjoy the goodness of Camel's mild, ripe, costlier tobaccos with meals and after say:

"—for Digestion's sake...smoke Camels"

One of life's most enjoyable experiences—the pleasure Camels add to eating!

Notice how much of the zest for eating is restored when you smoke Camels at mealtime. Each Camel helps to increase the flow of digestive fluids...alkaline digestive fluids...so necessary to well-being.

Better for steady smoking

Enjoy Camel's mild and costly tobaccos whenever you like. Experience the cheery "lift"—the aid to digestion—the sense of well-being that Camels bring.

Camels do not get on your nerves or rasp your throat. Camels set you right—the whole day through!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS...Turkish and Domestic...than any other popular brand.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

"I EAT HEARTY," says Gus Kramer, master carpenter. "And that's one reason why I smoke Camels. They help my digestion. I always enjoy my meals more and feel better after eating when I've smoked a few Camels. Camels set me right!"

Marked Expansion Registered by Baxter Maddox Agency

SEVEN ARE ADDED TO ITS PERSONNEL

Connecticut Mutual Organization Discloses Sharp Increase in Business.

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., established in 1846 and for the past 70 years active in Georgia, has enjoyed a remarkable record during this period, according to N. Baxter Maddox, Atlanta general agent, who has directed the destinies of the local agency since August, 1933.

During 1935, says Mr. Maddox, the company registered an increase of $22,000,000 in life insurance in force, and during the first six months of this year it has shown a further gain of $12,000,000.

Under Mr. Maddox's direction, it is stated, the local agency has been developed into one of the largest and strongest in the city, having won last year the company's sectional trophy for increased production. "During the first half of the year," says Mr. Maddox, "our paid-up production showed a gain of 19 per cent over the same six months of last year, and we anticipate an even greater percentage of increase during the last half of the year."

The Baxter-Maddox agency, due to its increased production, has added to its staff, during the last 60 days, the following representatives: Charles Brawner and Francis Wilkerson, of Atlanta; Charles Brantley, of Athens; Ralph Deas of Augusta; William L. Clark, of Louisville; C. H. Peacock, of Canton; and Mrs. E. V. Austin, of Lawrenceville. The agency has several other openings, Mr. Maddox states, and adds "we hope to fill these in the near future, in order that the company will be well represented throughout the state."

On August 15, the entire personnel of the Georgia Connecticut Mutual organization will gather in Atlanta for its annual anniversary party, at which appropriate prizes will be awarded the agency leader, in appreciation of their achievement of the past year. Mr. Maddox states the guaranteed retirement income contract is increasing in popularity and accounts for a large volume of the agency's business.

Other members of the Atlanta organization are Miss Carrie Lee Waddell, Mrs. Emaline Neilson, George Weyman, Albert Erwin, Jr., G. P. Willis Jr., Nicholas Andrich, Edgar Strauss, Paul L. Breyer, Lawson Kiser, M. L. Harper and Clay W. Penick, all of Atlanta; B. L. Hollis, of Crawfordville; George L. Bell, of Tignall; D. O. Thurston, of Jackson; Peniston Smith, of College Park; and Horace R. Cole, of Carrollton.

Flyer Pays High Tribute To Se-Fly-Go Efficiency

"Art" Bussy, Candler field man, of the Strickland-Bussy Air Charter Service, declares he has found Se-Fly-Go insecticide, manufactured by the Selig Company, most effective for protection against flies, mosquitoes and other insects during trips along the coast.

"Art" Bussy, of the Strickland-Bussy Air Charter Service at Candler field, who has flown more than 4,000 hours, or the equivalent of 500,000 miles of successful air travel without an accident, Saturday paid glowing tribute to Se-Fly-Go, product of the Selig Company.

"In flying," said Mr. Bussy, "the successful operator is always in search of the best. His training in using airplanes causes this. When one flies a 27-passenger Condor, or tests a stratosphere ship such as I have just been doing for Clarence Chamberlain, or when one flies newsworthy ships to take pictures of a burning Morro Castle or in search of survivors of an Akron, one must insist on the best of gasoline. This continued search for and use of the best is part of a pilot's training."

"Recently I established a service taking week-end fishing parties in my all-metal Flamingo, a radio-equipped ship which has a cruising speed of 140 miles an hour, and climbs 5,000 feet in three minutes, carrying six passengers and two pilots. Everything was fine and dandy, but when we got into St. Augustine, St. Marks or another coast resort, the mosquitoes and bugs would eat us up."

"Again a search for something started, and after trying many insecticides I found Se-Fly-Go. It proved itself to be the very thing, for it actually kills flies and mosquitoes."

"In discussing the efficiency of Se-Fly-Go with John E. Nelson, director of sales and advertising, of the Selig Company, he told me Se-Fly-Go is thoroughly tested for kill, and it was most interesting to read the test reports from outside commercial laboratories, telling of tests Se-Fly-Go has undergone."

"A number of five-day-old flies were placed in an airtight chamber six feet square, into which was sprayed 12 cubic centimeters of Se-Fly-Go. The cage was kept closed 30 minutes, and then all the flies found lying on the floor were counted. This process, which was repeated with competitive insecticides, is called the 'knock-down' test."

"Se-Fly-Go, it is asserted, showed a kill of from 92 to 98 per cent, against kill tests of from 32 to 63 per cent for some of the inferior insecticides. The latter, it is stated, was the highest competitive kill tested."

Mr. Nelson states that without doubt customers are obtaining the greatest insecticide value in the history of the company.

"It is believed," he says, "that once the general public begins to compare insecticides on the basis of their killing power, rather than on the basis of their knock-down power, then Se-Fly-Go will stand pre-eminently in the forefront of similar American products."

For more than 40 years the Selig Company has been one of the largest and most outstanding manufacturers of disinfectants, insecticides and sanitary products in the country, and has confined their manufacture to products of high quality that will do the work for which they are intended.

AUBURN AND CORD ATTRACT INTEREST

W. C. Denny Stresses Combination of Beauty, Performance in Cars.

Combine beauty with proven performance, declares W. C. Denny, president of W. C. Denny Motors, 240 Peachtree street, and you have a set-up which is difficult to beat—one which will command attention and a sustained interest.

"If you don't believe this is true," he says, "don't visit our showroom. Stay away, but stand outside—and watch the number of those who do come in for a close inspection of the 1936 super-charged Auburn and the equally up-to-the-minute Cord. During the course of a day, several scores of interested persons, passing along Peachtree, will come in to look them over. Many, perhaps, already are familiar with the established performance records of these cars. Their eye-catching beauty brings these passersby in for a close look at their manifold features of design and construction."

Nor, says Mr. Denny, is this "passing inspection" the extent of the motorists' interest in the Auburn and Cord. Figures, he declares, do not lie. Measured in terms of deliveries, he reports, June was the greatest month for the company's cars. There is more interest in the improved Auburn, and July has disclosed an equally strong demand for these two cars, with the result that 1936, to date, shows a very substantial increase in sales over the same period of last year.

The super-charged Auburn, Mr. Denny points out, is known in the automotive field as the world's fastest stock car, having broken 70 different speed records. "At 60 miles an hour," Mr. Denny asserts, "its 150 horsepower super-charged Lycoming engine is merely loafing. There is a tremendous reserve of power, instantly available for emergencies, adding immeasurably to driving safety."

Mr. Denny directs special attention to the major features of the Cord, chief among which is its front-drive construction, the result of 10 years of continuous effort and testing. Among other features he cites are its simplicity of design, its low center of gravity, its amazingly efficient performance, its automatic shifting of gears and its original interior treatment.

"The new colors of these cars," he adds, "hold a strong appeal for men and women alike who want automobiles of individual design. Passersby have shown a very decided interest in the new Auburn and Cord, and the new Auburn and Cord, which is distributed for both Auburn and Cord, also maintains a fully stocked used car lot at 511 West Peachtree street and also has a number of better-grade reconditioned automobiles at its 240 Peachtree street building, where they may be inspected at any time. All cars have been completely reconditioned."

Mr. Nelson states that without doubt customers are obtaining the greatest insecticide value in the history of the company.

"It is believed," he says, "that once the general public begins to compare insecticides on the basis of their killing power, rather than on the basis of their knock-down power, then Se-Fly-Go will stand pre-eminently in the forefront of similar American products."

For more than 40 years the Selig Company has been one of the largest and most outstanding manufacturers of disinfectants, insecticides and sanitary products in the country, and has confined their manufacture to products of high quality that will do the work for which they are intended.

Mr. Nelson states that without doubt customers are obtaining the greatest insecticide value in the history of the company.

Atlanta Envelope Company Gets Improved Equipment

This new machine, recently installed by the Atlanta Envelope Company, is the latest type and will print envelopes at the rate of 18,000 per hour.

Envelopes at the rate of five per second or 18,000 per hour are produced by new equipment just installed by the Atlanta Envelope Company, in accordance with the company's long-adopted policy of constant improvement in facilities. The first of this new and improved type to be delivered in this section of the country, and representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, the machine incorporates the latest developments in envelope manufacturing, according to Sig Gutman, president of the firm.

"We expect this equipment to materially increase our capacity, which is already near a million envelopes a day," said Mr. Gutman. "But we are more interested in the improvement in quality which we can now offer our customers." The new machine will produce open-end envelopes in sizes ranging from No. 1 coin envelopes to 6 1/2 x 9 1/2 catalog envelopes and may be adjusted to make various types of seams and sealing. Powder-tight corner envelopes, which will hold even the most finely powdered substances without leakage, as well as envelopes for seeds, coins, scarfs, gloves, catalogs and insurance policies are made better and more quickly.

The company has been under the same management for its entire 43 years and has grown from a small business to its present large plant at 505-7-9-11 Stewart avenue. The addition of these new facilities is one more step in the development of one of Atlanta's largest concerns.

Shop Likened to Family Physician By United Motors Service Manager

The motorist who selects his service shop with the same care he exercises in selecting a family physician is a wise motorist, declares R. B. Wilson, service manager of United Motors Service, Inc., 467 West Peachtree street, N. W.

"The automobile, in these days, is in a sense a member of the family," he asserts, "and a really indispensable unit of the whole. Just like any other member of the family, it is subject to ailments and disorders, and the 'doctor' who treats it should be a qualified graduate in his profession. This is the position United Motors Service fills in many hundreds of families. It likewise is 'house doctor' for scores of commercial establishments which operate trucks."

The United Motors Service shop, Mr. Wilson points out, is fully and well equipped for its work as a major hospital for the human patient—perhaps even better equipped than many for the work it accomplished, due to its specialization in departments.

The motor analyzer, he declares, will disclose motor ailments with an efficiency equal to and sometimes more quickly than the stethoscope of the medical profession. It will reveal with unerring accuracy the seat of any motor trouble and the degree of its seriousness, thus facilitating the task of correction.

Mr. Wilson advises the returning vacationist as well as those contemplating late summer journeys to have their cars checked over thoroughly in the United Motors Service's step-by-step shop. Here, where the work is completely departmentalized, with each phase of automobile work in charge of one or more factory-trained experts in their designated lines, such a check-up and corrective measures may be effected both speedily and economically.

One department, for example, handles all parts allied with the electrical system. Another covers all phases of motor tune-up. Others attend to lubrication, alignment, brakes, shock absorbers, chassis tightening, radio, battery, radiators and cooling systems, valves, and repair, adjustment or replacement of motors.

United Motors Service, says Mr. Wilson, is complete, and the motorist who fails to investigate it "is not giving his car the best of medical attention."

HUMAN RIDDLES

That Have Vexed the World

By VINCENT TOWNE

WHO WAS STEPHEN THE LITTLE?

Catherine, daughter of the Prince Anhalt-Zerbst, married in 1745 Carl Peter Ulrich, grandson of Peter the Great. Seventeen years later, when her husband succeeded to the throne as Czar Peter III, she immediately entered into a conspiracy with her paramour, Gregory Orloff, to have him deposed. So Peter III was put in prison by his treacherous wife, who six months after his succession usurped his throne as Catherine II. She proved to be a strong ruler. No sovereign since Ivan the Terrible had extended the frontiers of the empire by such vast conquests.

After her husband had been cast into prison it was given out that he had been put to death. Five years later, however, he appeared in Cattero, a seaport of Dalmatia, a stranger identified as the supposedly dead Peter III by a person who had once made a visit to the state to the court of Russia. According to this witness, the newcomer for a strong ruler they now listened to his strange story.

About this time there reigned over Montenegro the Vladika Sava, who having been shut up for a score of years in a monastery, was not proving himself a strong ruler such as he needed to fight off the threatening Turks. Montenegro was in a sore plight when there crossed its frontiers no less a personage than the stranger previously identified at Cattero as the lost czar. The story of his identity spread and the man of mystery, with apparent reluctance, confessed that he was Peter III. As the Montenegrins yearned for a strong ruler they now listened to his strange story.

He pictured many wonderful adventures befalling him since his escape from the death intended for him by his false consort and he stated that his disgust for his treacherous court was such that he would never return to Russia. So the Montenegrins lost no time in asking the newcomer to lead them against their enemies and the Vladika agreed to look after the spiritual welfare of the people and allow the supposed czar to attend to their temporary affairs. Inasmuch as the Vladika combined the powers of pope and king, Vuk was not such a difficult matter for him to divide his authority.

Thus "Stephen" as the alleged Peter III now became known, took over the actual government of Montenegro. He proved to be a strong ruler. Evil-doers were no longer able to escape punishment by bribery or threats. He established courts of law whose sentences were carried out. Thieves were shot and criminals of all classes began to tremble in their boots. He sought to improve transportation systems and went so far as to abolish Sunday labor.

Other nations appeared to have accepted Stephen's story of his identity, but Delusionally, as Montenegrins' strength began to excite the envy of its neighbors, his pedigree was looked into more closely. Venice, by coming forward that he would take Dalmatia away from her, joined with the Turks in a war against Montenegro. Although Stephen is said to have been terrified by the approaching Turks, his courageous people fought on against overwhelming odds, as just as ignominious defeat was staring them in the face their courage was rewarded by a strange stroke of fate. There arose above the horizon a terrible storm which broke just above the Turkish camp and leveled it to the ground. While the Turks fled in panic the Montenegrins swooped down upon their stores and seized a wealth of ammunition which enabled them to defeat their foes.

Montenegro now loomed up as power to be reckoned with. The European press Catherine of Russia, hither ignoring Stephen's claim to be his husband, began coquetting with the Montenegrins by sending them munitions, but at the same time wrote a letter denouncing Stephen as an impostor. As Russia was strong, he was put in prison and it was announced that he admitted Catherine's accusation. If so, his alleged confession did not seem to spoil his people's confidence in him. They demanded that his strength be again enlisted for their protection.

Catherine then sent to Montenegro Prince George Delouchi, who had a name made a move which, in view of the empress' supposed murder of her husband and of Stephen's claim to be the victim of her treachery, was indeed remarkable. Taking Stephen out of prison he recognized him as a agent and restored him to power under the auspices of Russia.

Thereafter "Stephen the Little," he was known, successfully governed Montenegro until 1774, when by order of his enemy, the pasha of Serbia, he was assassinated by the Greek, Constantine the Little.

If Stephen the Little was an impostor, he was the only one in history who died upon a throne freely given him. Whatever he was, he was a man of brains and a possessor of a high order of intellect, as well as a world of resource. According to the Vladika Sava, he was not in fact Peter III, but a descendant of Stefan Cernovich, the successor of Giorgio IV.

Who he really was the world never knew.

"It takes a heap o' livin'"

In a house t' make it a home." Dad likes his big easy chair for smoking and reading the evening papers... son teases for things for his rumpus room... daughter dotes on modern furnishings for double duty... Mother manoeuvres for electric servants to give magic performance... even Grandma longs for a low rocker to rock and knit away the hours.

"Ye've got t' love each brick an' stone from cellar up t' dome:
It takes a heap o' livin' in a house, t' make it home."

It's a deft but delightful art, this turning a house into a home. Let our 69 years of experience be your "guiding star."

Mr. and Mrs. Harper's Pine Log Cabin Is Built on Stage Coach Road

By Sally Forth.

ONE of the handsomest and most attractive log cabins is owned by Mr. and Mrs. John L. Harper just beyond Decatur on the old stage coach road between Atlanta and Macon. The cabin has been christened Jonadelle, and combines the given names of the owners. It is built of pine logs hewn from timber on the Harper farm and was built by day labor under the supervision of Will Harper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harper. The cabin is closely allied to the spirit of its wooded surroundings and is built upon the crown of a hill.

The plans feature a long living room with steps at one end that lead to a balcony outlined with criss-cross pine logs. Two bedrooms, a bath and the kitchen complete the perfectly arranged floor plan. 100-year-old millstones are sunken in the flagstone terrace in front of the doors that enter into the living room. The stones were used in the mill that stands on South river, which runs through the property and which rises beneath the former union station that stood on Wall street.

As the cabin reverts to the early American type of architecture, all of the antique furniture is made of pine and maple to correspond with the period. The walls are made of paneled pine boards and the three-drawers are studded with antique nail heads. The stone fireplace on one side of the living room is graced with antique andirons to hold the pine logs that will warm the house in the wintertime. Copper screens guard the mullioned plate glass windows from insect invasion and reflect the color of the pine logs.

Two needlepoint pictures on the wall feature hunting scenes that hark back to by-gone days. These priceless pictures once hung upon the walls of the home of the late James W. English Jr., when his mansion stood at the corner of Peachtree and Prescott streets. Seven natural springs down in the dell on one side of Cabin Jonadelle will provide the water for the lake and a tennis court, a barbecue pit and pavilion are attractions. The Harper farm comprises four hundred acres and is not far from Little Stone Mountain near Panama, in DeKalb county.

MINNIE Lou Rogers Hill is as well known here as in Macon, because she called Atlanta her home for many years. Her career as a businesswoman is being watched with a great deal of interest, for Minnie Lou is the proprietor of a large trucking concern in Macon, which was begun by her late grandfather, William H. Mansfield. He was an Englishman who fought on the side of the Confederacy, and the business has remained in Minnie Lou's family for 69 years.

Minnie Lou is quite a beauty. She has golden hair and gray-blue eyes and is quite attractive. She manages all of the business hauled by seven huge trucks and the plant includes big wooden buildings and sheds for the trucks. Her office is built between the sheds and Minnie Lou has handled successfully some of the biggest deals pulled off in Macon.

Parties Compliment Miss Lucile Jones, August Bride-Elect

Mrs. J. Gordon Jones will be hostess at a trousseau tea on Wednesday afternoon at her home on Anderson avenue in West End in compliment to her daughter, Miss Lucile Jones, whose marriage to William Howard Talbot will be an event of August 1.

Another lovely affair honoring Miss Jones was the lingerie shower at which Mrs. Walton Folk entertained recently at her home on West Ontario avenue in West End. The house was decorated in pink and white garden flowers and this color motif was further accentuated in the refreshments.

A number of original contests featured the evening's entertainment, and the guests wrote telegrams of congratulations which were later bound in a beautiful cover and presented to the honoree. Mrs. N. A. Proctor, mother of the hostess, assisted in entertaining.

Vickers—Chester.

TENNILLE, Ga., July 26.—The marriage of Miss Lucile Vickers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Vickers, and Lamar Chester, of Atlanta, was solemnized on Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, six miles from here. Rev. T. L. Harris, of Wrightsville, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering. Miss Barbara Hartley played the wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Sam Simpson, of Dublin, who sang.

Miss Lilla Simpson, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Kenneth Keefe, of Atlanta, was Mr. Chester's best man. The bride was lovely in a gown of white mulling with white accessories and she wore a shoulder spray of pink roses and valley lilies. Miss Chester's gown was of blue chiffon and she wore a cluster of roses.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Vickers entertained at an informal reception. Assisting in receiving were Mrs. Harry Gilbert, of Tennille, and Mrs. C. H. Vickers, of Macon. Many friends from Wrightsville, Tennille and Sandersville attended the wedding. Out-of-town guests were Miss Virginia Raugh, Madison; Miss Ruth and Sara Dudley, William LaFollette, riding at 5 o'clock. Former campers, friends and relatives are invited.

In the form of a tour around the world, the pageant will portray the search for a girl most representative of the fine things at Camp Highland. Awards will be presented to Miss Camp Highland, senior and junior. The pageant, illustrative of camp activities, is planned and directed by Misses Virginia McLaurine, Sarah Lawrence and Ann Johnson. Each country will have charge of a skit, with Miss Marjorie LaFollette, riding instructor, directing a fox hunt typical of England; Miss Mildred Chandler's group depicting "Les Miserables" for Germany; the Olympia, featuring last sports taught by Sarah Lawrence, Dorothy Henry, Mildred McMullen and Elizabeth Burson, will picture Germany; mountain climbers of Switzerland will be represented by Virginia McLaurine, Frances Starnes and Pauline Green; folk dancers of Sweden will be directed by Miss Frances Donnelly; an opera skit representative of Italy arranged by Mildred Chandler and Bernice Martin; arts and crafts from the workshop of Miss Mary Matthews will be reminiscent of Japan. Miss Tony Denman and Miss Connie Pardee will conduct a group in archery which will typify Indian reservations. Incidental music for skits will be played by Miss Bernice Martin and costumes will be arranged by Miss Nora Dill.

July 30 marks the close of junior camp period and on August 1 Camp Highland will be reserved exclusively for adults. Arrangements may be made to commute evenings, spend entire vacations or to enjoy week-ends in the country. The program will be flexible and informal, with opportunities for rest and relaxation as well as sports, horseback riding, dancing and hikes.

"Effective Relationships of Home, School and Community to the Parent-Teacher Movement" was the theme of the fourth annual conference of the institute conducted by the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers through the co-operation of the University of Georgia.

Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, president of the Athens council, welcomed those attending the institute. Dr. E. D. Pusey, director of the summer quarter, spoke of the inequality of education in Georgia schools caused by teacher inequality and of the inadequacy of local support of the schools.

Greetings from the National Congress of Parents and Teachers were extended by H. K. Rector, president and chairman of international relations of the national congress.

Mrs. R. A. Long, first vice president of the Georgia congress, responded to the greetings, thanking the speakers in behalf of the Georgia congress.

Upon the Foundation Depends the Structure of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, Dr. Charles D. Center, president of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, as he urged parent-teacher leaders to come together and study the problems of education to best serve the children throughout the state.

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, spoke of the importance of the parent-teacher relationship in the education of the child and for this reason the future teachers are being trained to co-operate with other child care organizations. Dr. Caldwell expressed the belief that the public schools and the colleges could do better work with the funds they now have, by rearranging their courses and dropping certain subjects from the curriculum.

Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, parliamentarian of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, presided at a local parent-teacher meeting with the proper order of business. Time was given for questions and discussion on by-laws.

Mrs. M. E. Judd, finance and budget chairman of the Georgia congress, advised a study of the new parent-teacher manual by local associations before attempting to prepare a plan for the budgeting of local funds. Mrs. Judd urged all delegates attending state and national conventions to register in order that there may be some record of the local associations being represented.

More than 120,000 health certificates were filed in Georgia last year, it was revealed through the State Department of Health. Georgia won the two awards given by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers to the state having the largest percentage of dental corrections and also the largest percentage of immunizations against diphtheria in the 1935 summer round-up campaign.

Being a greatly enlarged copy of the publication leaflet of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Miss Lucile Akin presented a pageant, introducing the Congress of Parents and Teachers. When the school was opened children, holding posters with the name of a congress publication, walked out. Following the pageant, Mrs. A. H. Reeve, representative of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, spoke on congress publications and gave many points vital to the success of a local association.

Conferences were filled with brilliant speaking talent and the discussions which grew out of the sessions served to improve the work of the local parent-teacher associations throughout the state. Inspirational and interesting conferences were conducted by Mrs. Otto Kolb, director of department of organization; Mrs. Joseph Mendes, director of department of extension; Mrs. F. Sessions, director, department of public welfare; Mrs. Frank Davis, director, department of education; Mrs. W. H. Perkins, director of home service department; W. W. Sibert, director of department of health.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest

DEFENSIVE BIDDING.

When your opponents have opened the bidding there are two cases in which you may wish to enter the bidding also.

1. For defensive purposes. You may wish to call your partner's attention to a suit in which to make an opening lead. Also, even if your hand is weak you may be able to make a sacrifice bid. This will pay if you are at less than the value of the game which your opponents can bid and make.

2. Of course, you must enter the bidding when you have such a strong hand that you may be able to bid and make a game yourself.

But in order to avoid being destroyed by set you must not overcall an opponent's bid unless you are safe under the rule of two and three.

The Culbertson Rule of Two and Three.

In defensive bidding count your winners and be sure that you can win, in your own hand, within two tricks of your contract if you are vulnerable and within three tricks of your contract if you are not vulnerable. Then you can never take a set of more than 500 points.

Hold-Up Play.

The hold-up play, intended to exhaust the communicating cards between the two defenders, is known to almost all players of average and higher rank, but strangely enough it is used almost exclusively at no trump contracts. Opportunities for its employment occur at least as frequently at suit contracts, but the play is either overlooked entirely, or shunned for some inadequate reason, usually the unwarranted fear of a ruff. In today's hand the success of the contract depends entirely on a hold-up play.

The bidding:

South West North East
1♠ Pass 3♠ Pass
4♠ Pass 5♠ Pass

North decided that, since his partner could not make an asking bid over the double raise, he himself would not be justified in passing the game level, by "asking" with his very bad (4-3-3-3) distribution. This decision was eminently sound.

West selected the club ten as his opening lead and the declarer took stock. His obvious danger lay in losing two tricks in hearts and two in clubs. A successful finesse against one of the heart honors would limit the heart loss to one trick, but if West had both honors, this maneuver would not work. However, even if this bad distribution of hearts existed, it would still be possible to make the game if South's long heart could be established before the opponents should grab their two club tricks.

On this perfect reasoning the opening lead was ducked. East overtook and returned the heart eight. Declarer played low and West won with the queen. Another club followed, and now declarer put up the ace, and three rounds of trumps, and led the heart jack, letting it ride. West won, but was now out of clubs and could not prevent the declarer from discarding dummy's club on his fourth heart, afterward ruffing the losing club in dummy.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Is there a penalty for asking, "My lead?" before the bidding has ended?

Answer: No penalty, but it is highly improper.

A talk was made by Mrs. Boyd Quarles, candidate for the state legislature, in which she presented Mrs. B. M. Boykin, state chairman and state editor of the Democratic Digest, who made a talk.

Mrs. R. L. Lecuyer, program chairman, presented the speaker of the day, and following his interesting discussion of this subject candidates for various county offices were introduced, as well as other special guests. A social half hour followed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

For Mrs. Rozetta.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Clara Daniel was hostess at a miscellaneous shower, honoring Mrs. J. A. Rozetta, the former Miss Emily Warren, and was assisted by her mother, Mrs. John Rozetta. Dealy, Eva Warren, George Phillips, Alvin Bowles, Bertha Etheridge, Miss Elizabeth Murphy, Mrs. Albert Mirandi, Mrs. W. G. Archer and Mrs. Ethel Becker.

My Day

By
ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

CAMPBELL, N. B., Friday.—All the way up through Maine people kept telling me things about Passamaquoddy Dam. Strange things had been done there.

Why did the houses have no chimneys? How could anyone expect to keep warm without fires in this climate? How could anyone expect ordinary people to pay for houses which cost $15,000 a piece? What was the point in getting old masters to hang on the walls?

So yesterday we went over and visited this much-talked-of village of a project. Three dams had been built. Two of them connect Eastport, Maine, which is on an island, with the mainland and are so built that the train and a new highway can come in over them so that they were useful to the state and its inhabitants.

One dam connecting two islands at the mouth of the Denny river is of no value unless the project is taken up again and finished. The village built for the workers on the project, can easily be turned over to the state.

The houses have no chimneys because there is a central heating plant and an electric stove and icebox. The "Old Masters" are photographs which cost 17c a piece, but look very well. The furniture comes from Vermont, is made of maple and the beds cost $5.00 each.

I was interested and inquired how all the furnishings was done. M. Blodgett, who was in charge, deserves great credit, for she has done charming job economically.

It may interest you to know that the mail order catalogue of a well-known firm was taken and they figured out that the lowest cost would be. Then bids were taken, and they found that for 25 per cent more the more durable and attractive furnishings could be bought.

There has been some criticism that the blankets are green and red color. They cost exactly four cents more a piece than if they had been ordinary olive drab army blankets.

The most expensive houses in the village would sell for $5,000, including the land, house, icebox, stove and a share in all the public utilities. There are nine houses in a very beautiful location built to be occupied by people on a fairly high salary basis. These cost $15,000 and I am sure will be wanted when the decision is finally made as to how this village shall be used.

I came away with the feeling that a good and honest job had been done, an idea very little of what existed would be wasted if people with imagination tried to use it.

My mother-in-law has a radio so we all listened to Governor Landon's speech. An effective speech, and I could only think of what difficult success may sometimes bring with it.

Dr. Ralph Wager Will Address Atlanta League of Women Vote

Mrs. Herman Kulman, chairman of the department of government and education of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, announces an open meeting of her group on Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at League headquarters. These talks will be handled by people who have attended the Emory demonstration school and who are able to speak with knowledge and authority. The feature of the meeting will be a book review by Ruth Hinman Parker, librarian at Sears-Roebuck. She will review Dr. Alexis Carroll's book, "Man the Unknown."

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

A Creamy Lipstick That Has Long-Lasting Qualities

By MIGNON.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, endorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

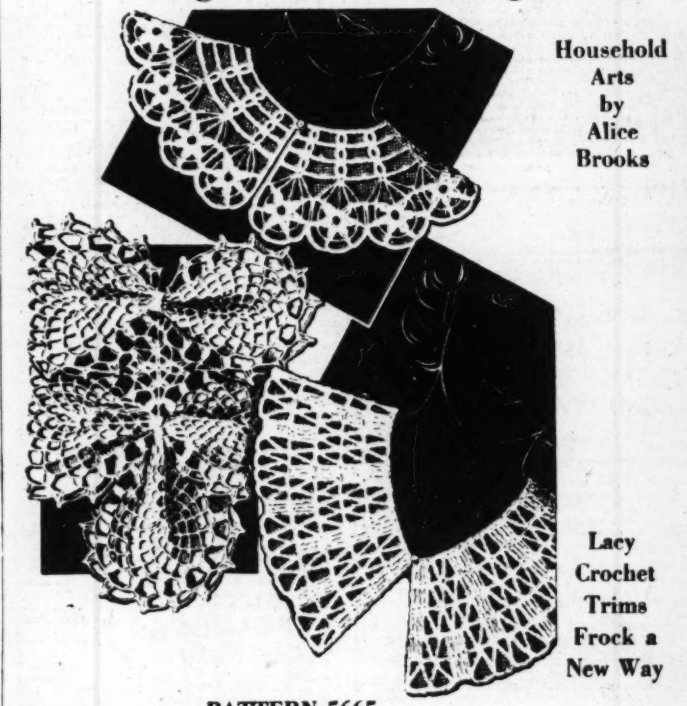

There isn't anyone who can say for you, "Here is a lipstick that will not turn color after it has been on the lips a little while." It is the chemical content of the body very often that causes lipsticks to change color. Lipsticks may be beautifully red when you put them on and in a few minutes they may turn a disagreeable purple. Pardon me if I tell you that it is the fault of your body and not of the lipstick.

So far as I am concerned, lipsticks might be made out of snails and puppy dog tails, only I am quite sure they are not. I am no chemist but I can tell you what a lipstick will do and I propose now to tell you about one that I think ranks among the best.

The reason I like this lipstick is

NEW ERA DAWNING, PREACHER AVERS

Dr. Newton Says Peace or Rain Depends on Revival in Religion.

The world is at the end of an era and the dawn of a golden era of peace and contentment under the leadership of God with world-wide revival in religion, or the collapse of civilization, are the two paths which lie ahead, Dr. Louis D. Newton declared yesterday at his morning sermon at Druid Hills Baptist church.

"World-wide collapse or world-wide revival—one of these will result soon," Dr. Newton said.

He declared it is the view of far-seeing leaders of the present that the world-wide unrest, present even in this country, and leading in others to riot and war, will result in profound change, the extent of which no man can foresee, but whether it shall be good or evil will depend on the return of the people and their leaders to God-fearing righteousness and good will.

Dr. Newton gave evidence of his belief in the adequacy of genuine religion to bring about a new era of peace and contentment, and in the present world maelstrom of fear and suspicion and bring forth an era of order and peace, but not, he said, "until leaders and people alike are willing today, even as was Herakleitos and his people of Judah in the long ago, to set themselves right in the eyes of the Lord of Hosts."

Woodrow Allen, 18, of a Harold avenue address, the most seriously injured, suffered a fractured pelvis. He was admitted to Grady hospital. His condition is fair.

According to police, he was a passenger in a car driven by Jesse Robinson, 19, of 645 Wylie street, S. E., who, with Howard McGurk, 17, of a Bankhead avenue address, and William Lefford, 24, of 212 1/2 street, S. E., suffered cuts and bruises.

They were dismissed following treatment at the hospital, to which they were taken by O. H. McCord, of Deatur, R. P. D. No. 1, who was passing in his car at the time.

RIDER ON MOTORCYCLE BREAKS COLLAR BONE

A fractured collarbone was suffered by Miss Urele Smith, 18, of 216 Gresham street, when she was thrown from a motorcycle driven by James Fitch, 22, of 532 West street, S. W., on Pryor road, near Lakewood park, at about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, according to police reports.

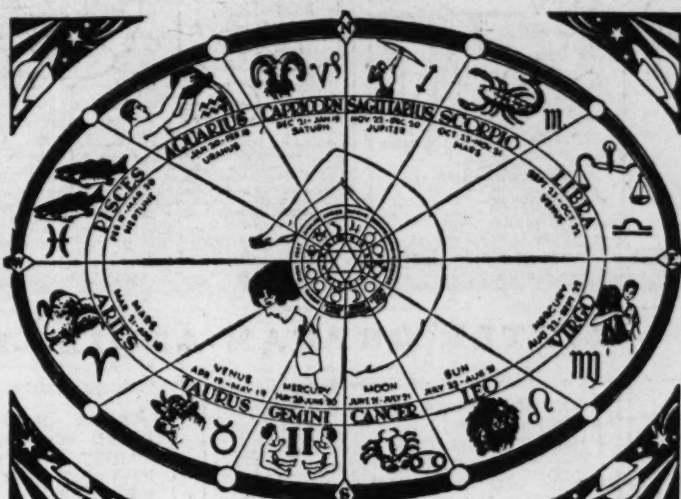

Fitch, who was cut and bruised, told police he met the girl at a dance and was driving her home when a speeding automobile approached. In order to avoid a collision, he veered, his wheel striking railroad tracks and hurling the girl to the street.

She was admitted to Grady hospital. Fitch was dismissed following treatment.

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

REDUCE SLOWLY FOR SKIN BEAUTY.

Take your own sweet time in reducing and save your face. Too great a loss of weight in a short time leaves the skin as loose and baggy as an over-sized glove! The penalty of a starvation diet is a "red-dirt" look in the face and a drawn expression, harder to lose than the pounds. Wrinkles which follow in the wake of reducing are caused by starvation and loss of elasticity. The disposition of the skin is determined by the amount of fat beneath it. The skin may never recover.

The skin is a flexible covering which expands and contracts to adapt itself to weight change. To allow for contraction, reducing must be slow. When the efficiency of the skin has been impaired by extreme overeating or fluctuating weight, the reducing pace must be even slower.

Once you make up your mind to reduce, you want to get it over with, but if you value your looks you will gauge your reducing rate by your physiological limitations. The maximum reduction speed occurs during the first month of your program and is one to two pounds per week—with one wrinkle. If you have a tendency to lose weight in the face and throat, one pound a week should be your maximum.

Skin contraction is a natural process, and it cannot be hastened. Beautifully, and it is far faster to average one-half pound less each week than to clip off five or ten pounds spasmodically. Twenty-five pounds a year may be good speed limit for you. All subject, of course, to your doctor's approval.

WE'LL MEET AGAIN

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

INSTALLMENT IV.

The next night it rained again. "I believe you're actually intrigued with the idea of going out with this man," said Diana, watching Gay dress. "Oh, my dear, it hurts so to see you being cheated like this! You should be putting on the loveliest dress in the world and going out with the people you were raised with. I don't know how I'm going to bear it, Gay. I think and think of everything we've lost. I'm going to get a job."

"What could you do, mother?" Diana smiled and shrugged. "Perhaps I could learn to cook."

Gay wore a dark blue suit, a small blue hat, and the twin fox furs her father had given her for Christmas. "I'm afraid you look too elegant, darling," said Diana. "Next year we'll have to make over our clothes."

At nine Chris Mallory knocked. Gay admitted him and introduced him to her mother. Macduff, not to be ignored, put himself deliberately in Chris's way to receive one of his rough caresses.

On the stairs Gay asked, "Where are you taking me?"

"To a party of some friends of mine."

"Don't you think I'll be a little out of place?"

"Undoubtedly," said Chris Mallory, flashing a smile, "but if they can stand it, I can."

"You like to be insulting, don't you?" she asked, running from the steps to a cab. "It gives you a great satisfaction to show me off. I hope you enjoy the experience because you'll never get the opportunity again. Tonight is a compromise."

"Tonight," he said, sitting apart from her and crossing his long legs, "you're going to meet the swiftest crowd you ever met. They're not your kind. They work hard and play hard. They've got their finger on the pulse of life."

Gay's voice was cool. "I paid a big price for your silence, Mr. Mallory."

She wondered why they were quarreling. Chris knew he had drawn her into quarrel because all day he had been telling himself he would not be a fool over her. He'd take her off her high horse, he thought; pierce her stubborn pride; Chris Mallory had never been a fool over any girl.

When the cab stopped before a brownstone house, she said, summoning her courage, "I'll try to make the best of it and not disgrace you with my bad manners. And since the evening has been forced on me, let's not quarrel any more."

"That," said Chris, "suits me fine."

And for a moment they smiled at each other.

The studio room where he took her was filled with people obviously enjoying themselves. One young man plucked earnestly at a guitar, another was playing the piano. Two couples were dancing. A young man in the uniform of an aviator was giving his strength to a pewter cocktail shaker. A little group in the corner were discussing Gertrude Stein. There was a mountain of sandwiches ready to topple over any minute.

Gay was agitated at the informality. Why—the girls wore sweaters and skirts! At no time in her life, except for sports, had she worn a sweater and skirt.

"I want you to meet Penelope Anders, your hostess, called Penny," said Chris of a small girl in a black skirt and red sweater.

"Hello!" said Penny cheerfully. She had short black hair with a fringe of bangs, wide black eyes, and a child's red mouth. "Hello, Chris. Would you like to powder your nose, Miss Van Avery? See you later, Chris. Help yourself to sandwiches. You're always hungry."

In the small bedroom Gay took off her furs and patted her curls in place. This was another world, she thought, conscious that Penny was regarding her gravely. She had stepped into another world and while she was keeping a promise to Chris Mallory tonight and mingling with these odd friendly people, somewhere in some lovely cool place Lucia and Alan, united again, were probably together. Stop thinking of them! Stop thinking of Alan! Penny had a lovely voice. She said, "I hope you won't be too bored. We all know one another well. This is really Mac's party. He's the aviator."

Mac Bolton.

Penny loved Mac, Gay guessed. She asked, "Why do you do, Miss Anders? Work, I mean?"

"Call me Penny. I draw fashions for Marchand's. Let's join the others."

It was a delightful evening. The people were real. They did things. Penny was an artist, Mac was an aviator, Paul Black wrote novels, and Chris was a reporter. There was a dancer in musical comedy and a boy who did radio dramatics. They didn't, thought Penny, talk about somebody's latest divorce, or the new color of Sandra's hair, or the chorus girl that Fred Benton was seeing secretly. They had no small talk. They talked of what they were going to do with their lives!

More than once she met Chris standing. It was a look that said, "I'm defeated. I admit it. Your friends are charming. They put my kind of friends to shame."

When the party broke up, Penny said, "Come to see me, Gay. Drop in any time for tea or a cocktail. I work at the store mornings. In the afternoon I free lance."

"I'd like to," said Gay. Would she make a friend of this gentle, talented girl?

In the hall near the door of her apartment she lifted her face to Chris. "Why don't you," he suggested, "go to Marchand's and look for a job? Don't pretend you don't need one. Don't look shocked. They'd probably give you a job as a model."

"A clothes model? Oh, I couldn't!"

"It's the only thing you're fitted for."

He stood quite close to her. Why had this girl come into his life to complicate it and to show him there would never be anyone else for him except Alan?

He took her shoulders and drew her close to him. His mouth was stern. "You said I'd better make the most of tonight with you, because there wouldn't be another. So—I'm taking something else I won't get again."

Gay felt lifted in his arms. She felt his arms go around her, felt his warm kiss on her lips. Then he was gone and for the second time she heard the vicious slamming of the door after him.

Trembling, with angry tears suffusing her eyes, she thought, "Don't fall in love with me, Chris. Don't! Because I can never love anyone except Alan!"

Wearing the same blue suit with the fox furs over her shoulders, Gay walked by Marchand's three times the next morning before she had the courage to go in. An ugly memory flashed across her mind. Last summer Patti had bought a dress there, supposedly the only dress of its kind in New York, and that night at a supper club had seen the same dress duplicated in a cheaper material. Gay remembered how shocked she had been when Patti, in a rage, had flung the gown in Marchand's face.

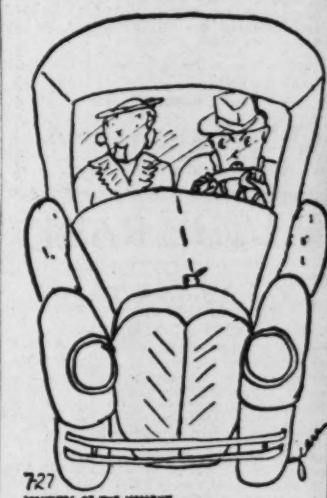

When she went into the shop, a saleswoman, recognizing her, said with professional pleasantness, "Good morning, Miss Van Avery. Is there something I can show you?"

"No. I'd like to see Miss Anders."

No face had ever looked so good as Penny's bright face when she came out, wearing the pounce smock. She drew Gay aside.

"Chris called me this morning and

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

She reads aloud every sign she passes.

Have you ever wanted to crowd someone who is always reading along signs she sees along the road? "Hog wagon 200 feet ahead," she read out joyfully, as though it were a piece of news or a gem of wit. "Room with bath for only a dollar and a half," she goes on. "Swimming pool and cabins ten miles ahead. The Weather Bureau says it will rain. Billy Inn, why not come in and have a wee bitty drink?"

It gets dreadfully monotonous. It's a wonder more drivers don't fall asleep at the wheel on account of riding with sign readers.

Having been both a reader and an anti-self, we think there's one cure. That is to beat your sign reading pal at her own game. Read the ones on your side of the road as loud just as fast as you can for half a mile stretch. If that doesn't cure her, you'd better join the anti billboard crusade.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

LETTERS FROM OTHER LANDS.

1—Canton, China.

Among the schools of Canton, China, is one with 275 students, most of them between the ages of 10 and 16.

On one side of a gateway leading into the grounds are Chinese words meaning "True Light Middle School."

Entrance to "True Light Middle School."

Many children in the school know how to speak and write English. The other day a letter came to me from one of their teachers, Miss Mary Alice Lehman, and the enclosed 27 letters from her pupils, all written in English. She said she had planned to choose one member of her class to write, but there were so many who wanted to send letters that she let a large number do so. So a big batch of letters came across the Pacific ocean. They took a long time to arrive because they had to travel thousands of miles.

All the letters seem interesting to me. Here is one of them:

"Dear Uncle Ray: I am a Chinese girl of 16, and am five feet high. I have black hair, and am not very fat. I live in Hong Kong, but I study in True Light Middle school, Canton."

"Our school is in Pak Hok Tun, a suburb of Canton. There are many buildings, but they are almost all one line. There are many trees and flowers."

"We learn English, mathematics, history, geography and Chinese. We also have girl guides. Sometimes we have a special trip for a few days, as we get pleasure out of it. Often I go to see the movies, and sometimes play with my brothers and sister. During summer vacation I shall go back home to Hong Kong."

"Yours sincerely,"

"WAI MING LEE."

Another letter, from Chui Sai Pic, comes like this:

"Canton is a very big city. There are about 1,100,000 people. There is a big river near Canton, and a mountain called White Cloud."

"Our school is a good place to study, because it is very silent here. There are about 30 teachers. We have a play hall in our new athletic field. In the evening we walk in the garden. The flowers are very beautiful."

"My family lives in Canton. I have two brothers and two sisters. We are very happy. I hope you are happy, too."

Among the other Chinese girls who have written to me are Yon Lai Fong, Yik Yin Hong, Chang Yuen Mo, Lai Ying, Tso Ling Kit, Seung Mei, Annie Jong, Wong Shuk Yee, Leung Wai Chee, Wat Chui Yu, Chan Ming Yee, Po Tsing Sie, and Yuet Shim Chui. Next time we shall have parts of several more letters from Canton.

(For Travel section of our extra book.)

If you want a free leaflet, "Miss Masters" send a stamped, return envelope to me in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

TARZAN AND THE MAYAN GODDESS No. 25

With the sudden start of the Lost City in his possession, Reglan completed his plans for his venture into the wilderness. His last act was to give certain secret instructions to a band of hired ruffians. "At least," he concluded, "put them in the hospital for a few days."

About this time, Tarzan and his companions were arriving in the town, blissfully unaware of Reglan's sinister activities. In the plaza a picturesque fiesta was in progress. Marimbas beat out lively rhythms while hundreds of brilliantly clad Indians danced and sang.

Tarzan watched with keenest interest. These people, like his own jungle folk, delighted in simple things, in exuberant song and dance. But with their primitive instincts were interwoven an ancient civilization, and a new: Mayan and Spanish. Tarzan did not feel at home.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The ape-man was aroused from his reverie by sudden shouts nearby. He turned and saw a mad bull, broken loose from his handlers, charging swiftly across the plaza. The revelers fled in wild excitement, but two children remained in the path of the galloping beast.

Jim Perry Says It's A Partnership of Rountree and Huie

Mr. Huie, Talmadge's appointee, will not profit by Rountree getting in, or rather being put into this race. Many Talmadge men are supporting Perry, and the anti-Talmadge voters are practically solid for him. And why not? They do not believe in the Governor removing officials elected by the people. Perry is regarded everywhere as the best qualified man for intelligent work on the Public Service Commission. The people are interested in his fight to bring TVA current to Georgia; they remember his work in reducing the rates of Georgia Power Company ten million dollars and in bringing natural gas to Georgia with a saving of one million dollars per year to gas consumers. The people will not be fooled by this partnership of Rountree and Huie.

BOY SAYS FATAL SHOT WAS SELF-INFLICTED

Negro Surrenders to Police After Death of White Boy Playmate.

Sought in connection with the fatal shooting of Harry Kinsey, 9, of 435 Pulliam street, S. W., Howard (Ham) Gunnell, 12, negro, of 434 Central avenue, surrendered to police early yesterday afternoon.

He was held at the juvenile detention home, pending a coroner's inquest at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the mortuary of Harry G. Poole. Detectives said the negro boy claimed the shooting of Kinsey, who was shot once near the heart with a bullet from a .38-caliber revolver Saturday morning, was accidental. They quoted the boy as saying, "Harry came to my house and wanted me to show him some stereoscopic slides. But I told him I couldn't because my father told me not to touch the slides.

"Harry acted a little sore, but he got over it, and he was walking around the house. He picked the revolver up out of a trunk. It was cocked and when he tried to break it, it went off, and the bullet hit him.

"I got scared, put the revolver back in the trunk and ran out. I went to where my father works and then went to my uncle's house, where I stayed over night."

The Kinsey boy staggered to an alley near the house, and then collapsed. He died shortly after being admitted to Grady hospital.
